D.C. Borrows 5000 Tons of Coal in Crisis

Emergency Fuel Going To Places People Live

Strict Rationing Will Be Applied To Extra Supply Loaned by PEPCO

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The District Government yesterday borrowed 5000 tons of soft coal and directed it to be used to heat apartment houses and other places where people live.

The coal is to come from the Potomac Electric Power Company's still adequate stockpile.

The Commissioners said the new supply will be allocated under strict rationing "to prevent or minimize suffering and serious direct damage to physical installations."

They ordered that the coal be distributed to consumers through regular coal dealers but only with authorization by the District Fuel Coordinating Committee.

To Spread It Thin

J. Thomas Kennedy, committee chairman, said he could not estimate how long the 5000 tons might be expected to last.

"We will spread it as thin as possible," he said.

The Commissioners borrowed the coal from Pepco after receiving a report that only enough coal to last commercial users through the week was available in dealers' bins.

They said that without additional supplies operators of apartment houses and other places where people live "would be unable to maintain temperatures at even the lowest level consistent with good health."

The Commissioners also said that owners of nonresidential buildings "might be unable to provide even the extreme minimum of heat needed to prevent grave property damage in a cold snap."

Air for Others

Kennedy said that while the borrowed coal will be used only to heat places of residence, the remaining supply in dealers' hands will go to business offices and to coal users with low priorities. These include churches, schools, stores, nonessential industries and places of amusement.

The Commissioners pointed out that through a previous earmarking they had set aside sufficient coal to provide for hospitals, orphanages, homes for the aged and certain industries deemed essential to health and welfare.

The available supply will take

U. S. and Britain Abandon Atomic Cooperation Talks

NYHT News Service

Efforts to negotiate an expanded atomic energy cooperation agreement among the United States, Britain and Canada have been abandoned, it was learned yesterday.

The ending of the talks which had proceeded intermittently since last September 20 is a direct sequel to the espionage arrest and confession of Dr. Klaus Fuchs, pro-Communist British nuclear physicist.

With abandonment of the negotiations, Britain and the United States have entered into a gentlemen's agreement continuing the present arrangement under which Britain allows the United States to take virtually the entire uranium output of the important Belgian Congo mines. Talks with Belgium, which is seeking a price increase, will continue.

Opposition Voiced to Building Of Christ Church Parish House

Architect's drawing of proposed new parish house

Opposition arose yesterday to the proposed construction of a new parish house by Alexandria's historic Christ Church.

Mrs. Robert M. Reese, a member of the 183-year-old parish, said graves more than a century old will be "desecrated" and the church itself will be dwarfed.

Last Thursday, by a 5-to-2 vote, the Alexandria Board of Architectural Review approved an application from the Christ Church vestry for permission to construct the new parish house at the southeast corner of the church property.

Mrs. Reese, who is a descendant of William Ramsay, Alexandria's first Lord Mayor, was one of the two board members who voted against approval. The other dissenter was Worth Bailey, Mount Vernon archivist.

"Ancient graves in hallowed grounds will be desecrated," Mrs. Reese said yesterday. "Christ Church itself will be dwarfed and overshadowed by the gigantic and imposing parish house."

The Christ Church parish dates back to 1767. The church itself,

Coal Negotiations Suspended As UMW Contempt Trial Opens

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Coal peace negotiations were abruptly suspended yesterday as the United Mine Workers, pleading innocent, went on trial in District Court charged with contempt in failing to halt the 15-day strike of its soft-coal miners.

After 12 days of contract discussions between the operators and the union, conducted under court order and prodded by White House observers, the talks broke up after a 45-minute session at the Statler.

David L. Cole, chairman of the President's coal fact-finding committee, announced the recess in negotiations, but emphasized the talks can be resumed "at an hour's notice."

The negotiators—who have been arguing for eight months over a work contract for the soft-coal industry, felt it was a "good idea" to discuss the negotiations with their associates, and to get a "change in environment." Neither Cole nor Cyrus S. Ching, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service director, offered any new note of cheer on the outlook for peace.

Meanwhile, in the crowded courtroom of Judge Richmond B. Keech, the Government brought up a parade of witnesses to testify that the UMW miners were staying away from the pits en masse in defiance of an antistrike injunction issued by Judge Keech February 11 at the behest of President Truman. The President had

Two U. S. Cargo Ships Strafed By Planes in Tsingtao Harbor

By the United Press

Two American merchant ships were attacked from the air yesterday in the harbor of Communist-held Tsingtao, China, and the State Department revealed it has protested to the Chinese Nationalists against "lawless attacks" on United States shipping.

First reports did not identify the planes involved in the bombing and strafing attacks on the American ships Flying Clipper and Pioneer Dale, but it was presumed here they were Nationalist aircraft trying to enforce a blockade of the Communist-held mainland.

The State Department's protest did not concern the latest attacks, but was directed against shelling of the United States freighter Flying Arrow by Nationalist warships on January 9.

The protest note, delivered to the Nationalist government February 3, asserted the Flying Arrow was on the high seas when it was attacked and disabled by a Nationalist warship.

"The United States Government holds the Chinese (Nationalist) government fully responsible for the violation of American rights on the high seas, and expects to receive at the earliest possible date assurances that there will be no repetition of such lawless attacks," the note said.

Department spokesmen said the Nationalists have not yet replied.

$100 Million GI Bonus Bill Makes Headway in Maryland

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 27.—A bill to create a 100-million-dollar bonus for Maryland veterans advanced in both houses of the Maryland General Assembly tonight over vigorous administration efforts to block the proposal.

Bonus backers waited only until Governor Lane's budget had cleared its legislative processes before petitioning the companion measures out of the rules committees, where they had been stymied by the administration.

With no committee reports to back them up, petitioners in the two houses were able to rally enough support to advance the bills on roll call to second reading.

In the Senate, the vote was 20 to 9. In the House, it was it squarely up to administration 82 to 31. These maneuvers put forces to find some means before the Thursday night deadline for the session's end to kill the bonus bill or give Gov. W. Preston Lane the unpleasant job of vetoing the request for the referendum.

The House discussion of the bonus proposal was highlighted by practically identical pleas from two members of nearby delegations to forget political considerations in voting on the measure.

Montgomery County Delegate De Witt S. Hyde warned delegates

Mysterious Ailment Is Fatal To D. C. High School Boy, 15

A sturdy Bell Vocational High School student died mysteriously in his home, 2129 18th st. nw., late yesterday.

Wesley Franklin Taylor, 15-year-old football player and skating enthusiast, had not been ill, his family said.

Wesley

He did not go to school yesterday, according to his mother, but stayed around the house. He went to sleep in the afternoon. At 3 p.m. he awoke and called to a stepbrother, William R. Holden, to ask the time.

When his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, chief telephone operator at the Roosevelt Hotel, returned shortly after 4 p. m., the boy was suffering from convulsions.

The stepbrother, a Tenth Precinct police private, called an Emergency Hospital ambulance, but Wesley was pronounced dead by Staff Doctor Lunetta Memming when the ambulance arrived about 5 p. m.

The body was taken to the District Morgue where Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald will perform an autopsy today to determine the cause of death.

The boy also is survived by two other stepbrothers, John Holden, 2446 S st. se., and James Holden, 2129 18th st. nw.

Labor Party Drops Three More Seats

London, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison warned Labor Party political workers tonight to be ready for another parliamentary election.

"We cannot know for certain when the next election will come," Morrison said at a Labor Party "jubilee" rally, "but we shall be wise to be prepared for the possibility that it will come sooner rather than later."

Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee conferred with King George for more than an hour this evening on the fact the Labor Party emerged from Thursday's general election with a tiny majority of seven seats in the new Commons.

Two More for Tories

Delayed returns from three Scots districts gave the Conservatives two more seats and the Liberals one.

Final results of the election for 624 members of the 625-seat Commons were:

Labor and affiliates 315, Conservatives and affiliates 296, Liberals 9, Independent Liberals 1, Irish Nationalists 2, Speaker of Commons (nonvoting) 1. Labor majority over combined opposition, 7.

(One more constituency, at Manchester, will hold its election March 9. The election was postponed when a Conservative candidate died.)

Morrison, in the first top-rank analysis of the result of the election, took the view that the voters made a serious mistake—that they really wanted to reduce Labor's top-heavy Commons majority just a little.

Cabinet Believed Presented

"The British electorate has a habit of knowing what it wants and has a habit of overdoing the getting of it," Morrison said.

"This time, I think it wanted Labor back but with a smaller majority. But to use printing language it said it in italics instead of Roman type and the result is that it has got a tighter situation than it meant. Well, it will have a chance to return Labor . . ."

It was understood Attlee gave the King the list of his new cabinet, slightly revamped as the result of the election, and went over with him the government's legislative program for the session of Parliament which opens Wednesday.

At the state or formal opening of Parliament next Monday, the King will read a speech—actually written by the cabinet—outlining government legislation for the new session.

Popular Vote Tabulated

As the government party needs a working majority of about 50 in the unwieldy Commons, it is expected the government program will be colorless and shorn of socialist adornments. Experts forecast a new election late this summer or early in the fall.

As the last results of Thursday's voting came in, the popular vote in the election also was announced.

The popular vote for the 624 districts:

Labor and affiliates, 13,197,265.
Conservatives and affiliates, 12,478,790.
Liberals, 2,608,984.
Communists, 89,644.
Others, 269,632.
Total, 28,644,315.

Price Props, Acreage Gain Win in Vote

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday voted (1) to keep the present high price supports for farm commodities, and (2) to increase the plantings of cotton, wheat and peanuts.

The latter action was taken in spite of the fact that the Government already has hundreds of millions of dollars tied up in surplus supplies of all three commodities.

The Senate also voted:

1. To withdraw price supports for potatoes in 1951 unless marketing quotas are in effect.

2. Against a proposal by Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) to ban all imports of Irish potatoes whenever a surplus exists.

3. In favor of a proposal by Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) to direct the Department of Agriculture to "offer for sale at point of storage any potatoes produced in surplus areas . . . for distribution and consumption in deficit areas" if such sales can be made without loss.

Williams Proposal Loses

Agriculture Department officials said last night that Thomas' amendment, like the Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) amendment on potatoes passed last Friday, does not change the present law. The department already is trying to sell potatoes without loss.

The vote to retain the present rate of price supports for basic commodities, corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, rice and peanuts, came in an overwhelming 17-to-60 defeat of an amendment by Senator John J. Williams (R., Del.).

The present law, known as the Anderson law, requires that prices of the six basic commodities be supported at 90 percent of parity this year and not less than 80 percent next year. After January, 1952, the support level will range from 75 to 90 percent of parity. Williams' amendment would have put the sliding scale into effect at once.

The Anderson law also provides that basics be supported under the higher of two parity formulas—one based on the price levels of 1909-1914 and the other on price levels of the last 10 years. Williams' amendment would have repealed the 1909-1914 parity base. Joining with Williams in offering this amendment were Republican Senators Irving M. Ives (N. Y.), Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.) and Robert C. Hendrickson (N. J.).

Crop Acreages Boosted

The amendments increasing crop acreages were:

1. By Colorado's two Senators, Eugene Millikin (R.) and Edwin C. Johnson (D.), to count fallowed wheat land in determining acreage allotments. In many areas, particularly Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska, farmers fallow (leave idle) part of their land each year to conserve moisture. Such fallowed land produces larger crops. Experts at the Agriculture Department say this amendment will add from 1.4 to 4 million acres to next year's wheat plantings.

2. Voted an amendment by Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) to permit peanut growers to grow unlimited supplies of peanuts. All above allotted quotas, however, would be sold through peanut crushers at prices fixed by the Government. The Government then will try to dispose of the oil without loss.

Leopard Hunt Is to No Avail

Signs Indicate Cat May Have Visited Zoo

Oklahoma City, Feb. 27. (U.P.)—A pack of Rocky Mountain lion hounds headed the air-ground hunt today for an escaped leopard which may be sleeping off a potion smeared on a piece of horse meat.

The baited meat, treated with a sleep-producing narcotic (nembutal), was left last night near the pit in Lincoln Park Zoo from which the jungle killer bounded to freedom Saturday. This morning the bait was gone and Zoo Director Julian Frazier said:

"We hope the leopard got some of it. If he did he ought to be pretty groggy by now."

But Frazier admitted raccoons and skunks may have taken the bait.

Seven canny dogs trained to trail mountain lines were flown from Colorado but their snuffling around the 20-acre zoo area revealed nothing.

The dogs and a hundred riflemen went back then to a section 11 miles away, where the 175-pound beast was reported seen yesterday.

The grassy area was burned off yesterday but the leopard was not flushed.

An Army helicopter arrived from Fort Sill, Okla., to hover over the search area.

2 Houses Pass Sothoron Bill

Measure May Reach Gov. Lane Tonight

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28 (Tuesday).—The House of Delegates passed the Prince Georges County Reorganization bill on second reading early this morning following a 28-0 favorable vote by the Senate Monday afternoon.

If the measure, popularly known as the Sothoron Bill, passes a third reading, expected tonight or Wednesday, it will go to Governor Lane for signature.

The bill originally was introduced by Senator L. Harold Sothoron (D., Prince Georges).

The original Prince Georges County reorganization bill introduced in the Senate early in the session was amended last week to eliminate the county's merit system. The delegation explained that this had been branded as a move designed to "entrench the present employes in office because the Democratic organization was in fear of losing its election in November."

Five other amendments also have been made to the bill. Of major interest were two changes requiring annual publication of financial statements, and that files of effective ordinances of the county be maintained for public reference.

All-Out Gambling Probe Is Planned; Heavier Sex Crime Sentences Urged

By Edward F. Ryan and Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporters

The House was asked yesterday to spend $40,000 for an all-out investigation of Washington gambling.

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) made the request in a formal resolution.

Davis, chairman of the special House Committee Investigating District Crime, said the money would be spent on a thorough probe of gambling here.

45-Day Investigation

If the request for $40,000 is granted, special investigators will be hired. Close to 1000 leads about gambling will be investigated, Davis said last night.

An investigation of the scope planned would consume approximately 45 days.

Witnesses would be questioned in executive sessions in the early stages of the gambling investigations, Davis said. "We could make a thorough investigation with $40,000," he said.

"There is work yet to be done on the general crime investigation," he said. "We could quit now but it wouldn't be a thorough investigation."

The $40,000 could be granted by the House alone. The Davis Investigating Committee still has a part of the $10,000 the House gave for the inquiry last fall.

Before the House can consider the new funds request, it must first clear through the House Administration Committee and its Subcommittee on Accounts.

To Confer With Davis

Accounts Subcommittee Chairman Thomas B. Stanley (D., Va.) said he would make no comment until he talks with Representative Davis. He said the $40,000 resolution will not come up for action in this morning's Accounts Committee meeting.

Chairman Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.) of the House Administration Committee said she thought it unlikely Representative Stanley's group would approve the $40,000 fund. She added, "Mr. Stanley is chairman and if he wants to grant it, it's O. K.

"If they make any investigation at all, it should be a thorough one," said Mrs. Norton, who formerly headed the District Committee. "I don't know why it should cost so much. They won't have very far to travel to get evidence. The evidence is right here in the District."

Davis last month disclosed his belief a thorough probe of gambling here should be made. But the subcommittee decided to hold off until a start had been made in

Kefauver Measure Broadened; Carries $100,000; Goes To Rules Committee

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved the Kefauver resolution providing for a sweeping investigation of interstate operations in organized crime.

The resolution was broadened to include not only "tygoons" who run interstate gambling rackets but any organized criminal activity that crosses State lines.

The committee said $100,000 was the "minimum" needed to conduct the investigation and asked the Senate for authority to employ additional technical and clerical help. A Judiciary Subcommittee would conduct the investigation.

Clearance by the Senate Rules Committee is necessary before the bill can take its place on the Senate calendar.

Rules Group to Consider It

Senate Rules Chairman Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) said he will invite sponsors of the measure to justify the proposed outlay at the next regular meeting of the rules group March 1.

The committee's action followed publication in The Washington Post and other newspapers and magazines of a series of articles on how "tygoons" operate.

The Judiciary Committee report said the resolution was based on these published "averments" and on material compiled by crime commissions.

Particularly cited was the second progress report of California's Special Crime Study Commission, listing bookmaking, slot machines, prostitution, narcotics, organized murder along with organized gambling among a "host of extortionate rackets playing upon legitimate business and labor in many different fields."

Almost Unknown to Public

The commission said men "almost unknown to the public and whose names never appear currently on any police blotter" run illegal syndicates.

"They live peacefully and luxuriantly, enjoying a full sense of security, and with complete confidence that they will not be disturbed in their criminal activities," the commission continued. "Their only real fear is concerned with the ambitions and competition of rival mobsters."

Introduced by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), the resolution approved yesterday originally provided for investigation of interstate gambling and racketeering.

In broadening the investigation, the Judiciary Committee said it felt the inquiry "should include

Dealers' Group Suspends Otis In Stock Case

By The Associated Press

The National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., yesterday ordered a two-year suspension, effective April 29, of the Cleveland investment firm of Otis & Co.

It offered to waive the suspension, however, if Otis & Co. would agree to supply it in writing with information the association has sought on an ill-fated Kaiser-Frazer stock deal.

The suspension grew out of the withdrawal of Otis & Co. from a contract to underwrite a 10-million-dollar offering of common stock by the automobile firm.

At about the same time the suspension was announced, Senator Frear (D., Del.) said on Capitol Hill that no further inquiry is warranted into charges made by Cyrus K. Eaton, a major Otis & Co. stockholder, against the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Frear is chairman of a banking subcommittee that met with Eaton for two hours behind closed doors.

The marriage was performed by Trial Magistrate Hugh McCaffrey at the Arlington County Court House.

The couple have "gone together" for five or six years since they met at Western High School, the parents said last night.

"They were determined to go through with it," Mrs. Henderson said. "We gave our consent, and they made all the arrangements. They were kind enough to let us come along.

"Jack is a fine boy," she said. "We're very happy about it, though we had hoped she would finish school first. They're on a honeymoon now. We don't know exactly where. But she will finish at the Tobe-Coburn school in New York. I understand Jack has to go to baseball training camp soon."

The bridge's father was OPA administrator during the war. The Hendersons have two younger children, a boy and a girl.

Castro is the son of Proctoso Castro, 810 24th st. nw. The father is retired after 45 years as a civilian employe of the Army Quartermaster Corps. John is the youngest of seven children.

Miners Spurn 'Red' Food as Officials Row

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 27 (AP).—A dispute raged here tonight over three tons of food contributed by Communist workers to striking coal miners.

The miners spurned the gifts. The Salvation Army, where the food was left, decided today not to distribute it and then ordered Communist officials in Baltimore to come and take it back.

But the Communists told the Salvation Army they expected the Army to "carry out your duty in getting food to hungry miners and their families. Kindly remember the solemn command—thou shalt not bear false witness against your neighbor."

The food, all nonperishable, was left at the Army citadel here last Thursday by George Myers, labor secretary of the Communist Party of Maryland. The Army's advisory board here sent this telegram to Philip Frankfeld, Communist Party chairman in Maryland:

"You are hereby notified to at once remove the supplies which through misrepresentation were left at the Salvation Army Citadel in the City of Cumberland on the evening of February 23."

The advisory board also absolved Maj. Elmer Wall of any blame for receiving the gifts and decided no large shipments of supplies be received in the future until their source is investigated.

In Baltimore, Myers said he sent this telegram to Major Wall:

"Food left at Salvation Army Citadel earmarked for miners per agreement with you. No strings attached. Expect you to carry out your duty in getting food to hungry miners and their families. Kindly remember the solemn command—thou shalt not bear false witness against your neighbor."

Myers said the food came from Communists and non-Communists. He said he took it to the Salvation Army after mine union officials said they had no facilities to distribute it and the Salvation Army was providing relief. He denied any misrepresentation.

After the food truck appeared, officials of two United Mine Workers locals issued these instructions to members:

"Beware of Communist Party trucks . . . trying to unload their cargo to the miners of this region. Miners and their families may need help but if we cannot get it from our own kind, we certainly don't need the help of the Communists."

At Muse, Pa., last week, Communist-donated food from New York City was distributed to striking miners after union officials refused it. It was accompanied by Communist signs and pamphlets. With the food shipment were shoppign bags stamped, "The Daily Worker," official Communist newspaper.

located on the southeast corner of N. Columbus and Cameron sts., was completed in 1773. George Washington was one of the first pew owners.

The church vestry wants to erect the new building on the southeast section of the church property, facing N. Washington st.

However, if the new building is erected at that site, Mrs. Reese declared, at least 10 or 12 graves will be affected. One of them, she believes, contains the remains of a soldier of the Revolutionary War.

Although there are only 44 headstones there now, she added, there are 311 persons resting beneath the grass-canopied church yard.

No Burials Since 1815

According to the Rev. B. B. Comer Lile, rector of Christ Church, there have been no burials in the churchyard since 1815.

"Just how many people are buried there is something nobody knowns," he said. "When the present parish hall was built (in 1854), some of the headstones were put aside and rested against the rear of the church for 75 years."

Even an historic shrine can be afflicted with modern-day growing pains, the Rev. Lile explained.

"When Robert E. Lee was confirmed in 1854," he said, "the congregation numbered about 120. Now it is about 1000."

He declared the new building is badly needed because the Sunday school is so overcrowded "we are losing children."

400 in Parish Now

At present, the Rev. Mr. Lile said, about 400 Sunday school children are crowded into a one-story parish building 40 by 70 feet. The new $155,000 parish house will be a two-story brick building 60 by 110 feet.

Mrs. Reese has urged that another site befound for the new parish house. The minister's answer is this:

"We have investigated all the possible alternatives and have come to the conclusion that the proposed site is the only one that will do."

Mrs. Reese is circulating a petition against the proposal and will present it when the project comes up again for discussion at a parish meeting at 8 p. m. Wednesday.

Mrs. Reese said she could definitely recall one grave that lives in the disputed section, that of "Sarah, wife of John Wrenn, who died August 13, 1792, aged 28 years."

The tombstone bears this inscription, she said:

"All you who come my grave to see,
"As I am now you soon will be.
"Prepare and turn to God in time,
"For I was taken in my prime."

Another grave in the church yard, Mrs. Reese said, is that of John Boyer, one of the last to be buried there. He died November 19, 1812.

Hoover Lauds AVC, Jr. C of C On VA Reform

Former Herbert Hoover yesterday praised the American Veterans Committee and the Junior Chamber of Commerce of the United States for their support of Hoover Commission recommendations for reform of the Veterans Administration.

Dr. Robert L. Johnson, chairman of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, also hailed the AVC indorsement of the recommendations. In supporting the recommendations at a meeting here Sunday, the AVC assailed the American Legion for its campaign against them.

Mr. Hoover, in a letter to Dr. Johnson from Craig, Fla., noted the AVC consists entirely of young veterans of World War II, and that the Junior Chamber membership is of men from 20 to 35 years of age, 85 per cent of them veterans.

"In the long run, it is these young men who will bear responsibility for seeing that we have a better government," Mr. Hoover wrote. "It is they who will bear the burden of failure. They know it.

The union waived its right to be tried by a jury on the criminal charge, which involves defiance of the court and damage to its prestige. The civil charge involves damage to the Government. In both charges, the union, if found guilty, faces stiff fines. The union has paid more than two million dollars in similar fines in recent years.

Union Blames Individuals

Through its chief counsel, Welly K. Hopkins, the UMW contends that the more than 350,000 soft-coal miners staying away from the mines are not conducting a union-authorized strike but rather are staying away from work on their own individual determination.

To establish extent of the walkout, Assistant Attorney General H. Graham Morison called Dr. W. H. Young, chief, bituminous coal section, Bureau of Mines. Young estimated more than 350,000 UMW soft-coal miners—about 95 percent of all UMW soft-coal miners—are staying from work.

Then the Government called mine representatives of coal producer associations, who repeated the same story: the miners were not coming to work.

Recessed Until 1:30 Today

At this point, early in the afternoon, the trial was recessed until 1:30 p. m. today, because Judge Keech wanted to hear opposing counsel argue in chambers the law regarding an approach on evidence which Morison wants to take, and the Government wishes to call UMW Secretary-Treasurer John Owens unavailable yesterday.

In the absence of John L. Lewis, attending the funeral of a brother in Illinois, Owens has been the chief negotiator for the union. He has been subpenaed to appear in the trial as a Government witness, and to bring with him all correspondence and records of verbal communication between UMW headquarters here and the field since the court issued the injunction.

"I don't think we will call Mr. Lewis in this trial," Morison said in reply ot a question by reporters.

Truman Waits For Court

House Speaker Sam Rayburn disclosed after a White House visit of Congressional leaders that the coal situation was discussed with the President, but there had been no talk of seizure legislation. He said the President could get such a law when and if he asks for it. The President has stated he will take no further action until the court completes its action relative to the Taft-Hartley injunction.

The coal shortage yesterday caught up with the gigantic U. S. Steel Corp. Its largest subsidiary, Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., said supplies are so low it is reducing steel making in the Pittsburgh district to half. Thousands of employes will be laid off.

In Washington, the Army ordered posts with less than a 30-day coal supply to cut consumption drastically.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams declared a "state of emergency" in Michigan, and thereby took power to seize and distribute available supplies of coal.

care of "this small group of users for some time to come," the Commissioners said.

PEPCO officials said that the 5000 tons turned over to the District constitutes about a two-day supply needed to generate electricity. The company now has a 55 to 60 day supply on hand.

Rent Administrator Robert Cogswell said that apartment house operators already are cutting down on heat.

He said his office yesterday was "swamped" with calls from complaining tenants. In all cases where investigation was made it was found that landlords were nearly without coal and had little prospects of getting more, he said.

The coal-burning Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, which last week curtailed service, made further cuts yesterday. It discontinued two local trains in Kentucky and one in West Virginia. "The Fast Flying Virginian," making trips between Washington and Huntington, W. Va., is to be suspended after today. It will leave the "George Washington" as the C. & O.'s only mainline train still functioning.

Prince Georges County coal dealers reported they were practically out of coal. Consumers were held to one-ton deliveries.

Effective Wednesday, night meetings will be suspended in Montgomery County schools. Dean Hugh G. Price said that Montgomery Junior College will continue to meet evenings in the coal-burning Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

Bus Union Says Strike Right Denied

Interstate Commerce Commission members, plunged involuntarily into a local labor case, were told in effect yesterday that they are helping to deny American citizens the right to strike.

The commissioners were hearing arguments in the case of the AFL bus drivers' union vs. the A., B. & W. bus line and the Commonwealth of Virginia, which is operating the bus company under the State antistrike seizure law.

The union complaint that the State has no authority to operate buses between Virginia and the District brought the ICC indirectly into the eight-month-old wage dispute between the company and the union, Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes.

An estimated 70,000 persons travel daily on the A. B. & W., which runs between Alexandria, parts of Arlington and Fairfax County in Virginia, and the District.

A company motion to dismiss the union's complaint was taken under advisement by the commission at the close of the hearing, in which Virginia Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond represented the State.

For the union, John R. Foley said the State of Virginia has taken away "the great right of United States citizens to strike in interstate commerce."

Attorney General Almond replied that Virginia does not want to operate the carrier, and is doing so only to protect the general welfare of the citizens.

The State took the necessary steps to comply with ICC rules and regulations, and has urged arbitration of the dispute, Almond said.

S. Harrison Kahn, attorney for A., B. & W., in asking dismissal of the union complaint, denied that the State "usurped" the authority of the carrier. He said the company has made three proposals to the union, which have been rejected, and that more than 50 percent of the bus line's revenue comes from interstate operations.

Wheeling Fire Sweeps Half a Business Block

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 27 (AP).—Fire ravaged half a business block in downtown Wheeling tonight, hospitalizing at least two persons and causing untold damage.

A crumbling wall of the six-story Danny Phillips building, where the fire started, narrowly missed firefighters when it toppled over. Firemen rescued at least 60 persons with ladders.

RCA Sees TV Color Delayed For Year or 2

By the United Press

An official of the Radio Corp. of America said yesterday the general public won't be able to buy a color television set for another year or two, at least.

Dr. Elmer W. Engstrom, RCA vice president, told the Federal Communications Commission it would take that long to get sets on the market, even if the FCC and the industry started working out color video standards "tomorrow."

But Adrian Murphy, vice president of Columbia Broadcasting System, said his company's color TV system has no fundamental faults and called on the commission for "prompt adoption of color."

He said CBS has conducted six weeks of thorough tests which revealed no trouble with color telecasting other than difficulties which occur "day after day in black and white operations."

The television officials testified as the FCC reopened hearings on whether color video is ready to go on the market, and if so which of three competing systems should get the go-ahead.

Marine Band to Travel Without Truman Okay

The U. S. Marine band will play at the 175th anniversary celebration of the battle of Lexington at Lexington, Mass., April 16 without President Truman's approval.

The White House announced yesterday that a bill to allow the band to make the trip became law Saturday without Mr. Truman's signature.

Some White House aides said that the cost of the band making trips ran fairly high and that requests came in so frequently that Mr. Truman was not disposed to sign the bill but did not want to

Eleven Extradited In Gaming Cases

At Race Track

Howser Says He Had Met Bugsy Siegel

Fred N. Howser attorney general of California, stated in a deposition filed yesterday in District Court that he met slain mobster Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel through Joseph Schenck, the movie mogul.

The deposition was filed in the $300,000 libel suit Howser brought here against Drew Pearson, columnist and radio commentator. Pearson's attorney took Howser's deposition in support of their case.

Howser said that he met Siegel but once, and then at the Santa Anita race track around 1943 or 1944. They were introduced by Schenck of 20th Century-Fox studios, according to the deposition.

Siegel was among a number of underworld characters mentioned in the deposition. Another was Mickey Cohen, the Los Angeles underworld figure. Howser denies knowing Cohen personally but said he knew of him.

Asked what Siegels occupation was, Howser replied:

"May I say—look at Cohen now. Both of them were men of mystery. I dont know of anybody who really knew what their businesses were. A multitude of sins, let us say."

In 1949, according to the deposition Howser assigned a man to be with Cohen 24 hours a day for "purposes of an investigation." Howser denied that it was to provide Cohen with a bodyguard.

Another acquaintance of Howser's was Bennie Plat, of Los Angeles. Howser described Platt as an associate of Screen Actor George Raft.

Howser admitted that he had sent out "thank you" notes to those who had worked for his election.

In his suit as filed originally, Howser objected to broadcasts identifying him as allegedly having associated with big gamblers and that former agents accepted "protection money."

Howser now has filed an amended complaint in which he no longer presses the gambler association count.

Pearson has opposed this move.

District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday extradited to Maryland 11 persons wanted on gambling charges in Prince Georges County.

They are 11 of the 19 men and women found March 25, 1949, in convicted gambler William "Snags" Lewis' headquarters at 4310 46th st., Bladensburg, during a raid by United States marshals. All were released on $500 bond.

Of the eight indicted gamblers not extradited, six already have given bond in Prince Georges County.

The other two are Lewis himself, who lives at 4335 Blagden ave., nw., and Anis Wycke, 122 F st., nw.

Lewis was not extradited because he is under $25,000 bond in the Court of Appeals, to which he appealed after he was convicted here on January 26 on a gambling charge. Wycke was not extradited, Prince Georges County States Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie said, because he was incorrectly indicted under the name of "Anis White."

With the exception of five women, all 19 were also indicted in the District and tried here November 2. The case ended in a hung jury last November 26. The retrial was delayed until October 4. Assistant U. S. Attorney William Hitz told Judge Holtzoff that the disposition of the case in Prince Georges County "will have great bearing on whether we will process against the defendants" again in the District.

Bowie said the case will not be tried before the April term of court. He said he would prefer not to try the case piecemeal with Lewis absent. The defendants are charged with operating a lottery and face maximum senfences of three years in prison and $1000 fines.

Extradition Contested

They contested extradition on the grounds that the government had not proved that they were fugitives from Maryland. After the government put a deputy marshal on the stand who testified that the 11 had been present during the raid, Judge Holtzoff ordered the extradition. The defendants were turned over to Deputy Sheriff R. Earl Sheriff of Prince Georges County.

The 11 extradited are Mae Cooley, 618 L st., se.; Helen Danhakl, 1831 2d st. ne.; Ralph Spottswood, 318 N. Henry st., Alexandria; Ellis Solet, 2805 Lee blvd., Arlington; Lonnie Black, 637 L st. se.; George P. Scott, 1031 E st., se.; Edward L. Hinkle, jr., 811 Presidential Gardens, Alexandria; Gregory Seger, 2801 22d st. se.; Sterling Welch, 4611 Verplank pl. nw.; Fred Sutton, 1210 6th st. nw., and Fulton Mitchell, 517 10th st. ne.

The six defendants who had already given bond in Prince Georges County are: Bernard J. Del-Negro, 2428 Tunlaw rd. nw.; Dean Kennedy, 2100 Queens Chapel rd., Avondale, Md.; John Ralph Mitchell, 3110 10th st. ne.; Sadie Stanton, of the 46th st. address; Theda Shepard, 3417 41st st., Brentwood, Md., and Mrs. Helen Maimone.

Douglas Favors Cut of Six Days Off Annual Leave

By The Associated Press

Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) served notice yesterday of his intention to try to cut six days off the annual leave of Government workers.

He submitted a proposed amendment to the urgent deficiency bill which would fix leave of Federal employes, including postal workers, at the rate of 20 days a year.

Present leave for workers outside the postal service amounts to 26 days a year.

Douglas' proposed amendment would grant 12 days sick leave each year for classified and wage board employes of the Government.

2 Held in $6900 D. C. Holdup

Ernest Price, jr., and Leroy Bundy were held for grand jury action on robbery charges under $10,000 bond each when they were arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Both men were arrested Sunday, less than 24 hours after Mrs. Blanche Boldware, widow of William Howard Taft "Sunshine" Boldware, a former numbers racket character, was robbed in her home of $6900 worth of jewelry.

Police said they recovered three guns, and the jewelry Sunday. They are seeking a third man alleged to have accompanied Price and Bundy in the holdup. Price, 24, lives at 2800 13th st. nw., and Bundy, 28, at 2238 8th st. nw.

The two waived preliminary hearing on the Boldware robbery charges.

Price also was charged with another robbery count in the holdup last September of Roosevelt Spencer, another numbers writer, in his home at 224 F st. ne. A total of $4200 was taken there.

The defendant denied the robbery. Commissioner Lawrence postponed hearing on that charge to March 8 but set additional $5000 bond.

As Price and Bundy appeared before Commissioner Lawrence, Spencer was entering a plea of guilty in Hyattsville Police Court to a charge of possession of numbers slips. He was arrested in Prince Georges County February 18, in his auto on a warrant. Judge Harry O'Neill fined him $100 and a suspended 6-months sentence.

House Group Asks $40,000 For All-Out Gambling Probe hearings of the general probe of Washington crime.

The committee already has heard testimony about "Mr. XXX." He is a powerful, but still unidentified figure in the Washington gambling world, whose telephone calls to local bondsmen get minor gambling figures out on bail at cut rate prices with generous credit.

The request for additional funds was made as the subcommittee started its investigation of sex crimes. During the three-hour afternoon session the subcommittee heard witnesses offer these specific recommendations:

1. Minimum sentences for sex offenses should be increased, although present maximums were described as high enough.

2. The public good would be served if the Metropolitan Police Department took over the responsibility of patrolling certain isolated triangles and small parks bounded exclusively by city streets, now patrolled by United States Park Police.

3. A law requiring all Washington laundries to mark washed clothing would "greatly help" detection of criminals.

Recessed Indefinitely

The committee recessed indefinitely at 5 p. m. It will not meet today. Subcommittee counsel Hyman I. Fischbach said he hoped hearings would be resumed this week.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) acting chairman, raised the question about the lack of minimum penalties for sex crimes under existing law.

His suggestion that such minimum penalties be established was promptly indorsed by Edward J. Flynn, managing director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

Permanent Commission

Flynn also told Counsel Fischbach his group is strongly in favor of setting up in Washington a permanent crime control commission.

Flynn presented a report prepared by the Washington Criminal Justice Association on sex crimes reported during the first six months of 1949.

He said 134 cases of sex crimes—rape and attempted rape, carnal knowledge and attempted carnal knowledge, were reported to police in the six-month period.

Of these 29 cases were forwarded to Juvenile Court. Six were unsolved. The other 99 cases were closed with adult arrests.

Flynn filed a statement, showing in the first six months of last year 42 sex offenses other than those in the rape, carnal knowledge, and attempted rape and carnal knowledge categories. They included all violations of the 1948 sex psychopath law, acts of indecent exposure, sodomy, and indecent offenses against children. Of the 42 cases, 21 resulted in a finding or a plea of guilty.

Flynn's statement pointed out:

Several cases were apparent attempts to practice prostitution, with reports to police being made either because of poor payment, or the need to explain the victims' absences to husbands.

Claimed to Be Older

In several cases the victim had engaged in intercourse over a period of time, claiming to be older than she was.

In cases reported as the result of pregnancy the complainant often wants to force marriage or obtain support for the child. The accused is sometimes an arbitrary choice among several potential fathers.

Several reports arose from drinking parties where facts were not clear to the complainant.

Flynn's statement added:

"Those cases dropped at the request of complainants, or the parents, are deserving of special comment, particularly if there is a desire to avoid publicity and court appearance.

"While this desire is understandable, it is not reasonable if it allows a sex offender to continue his conduct in the community.

"The police and the prosecutor need the full cooperation of citizens involved in order to obtain the removal from the community of all actual or potential offenders.

"In many cases involving minors it seems evident that among the reasons the child becomes either the willing or unwilling victim of a sex offense may be found an attitude of neglect on the part of parents.

Contributing Factors

"Thus, broken homes, working parents, lack of supervision, lack of discipline, lack of knowledge of the child's activities and hours and places of recreation are all contributing factors. It is also to be noted that in many homes and rooming houses there is little or no privacy and many opportunities for observing and practicing sexual acts, and that parental training has not included sufficient warning against accompanying unknown persons to rooms or isolated places, and accepting money or gifts from strangers."

The day's first witness was Lieut. John B. Layton, head of the Police Department's sex squad. Layton gave the subcommittee three detailed case histories: of a juvenile rapist, a molester of young children, and an offender whose crime was indecent exposure only.

Layton paid high compliments to the District's sexual psychopath law, the so-called Miller Act, which provides stiff penalties for sex offenders and treatment of habitual sex offenders as psychopaths.

"The act is very effective," Layton said. "It has given us the tools to work with that we didn't have previously."

Twenty-four persons have been committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital as sexual psychopaths under the Miller Act, Layton said. None has been released since the law was enacted in June, 1948.

Two suggestions were given to the subcommittee as a result of one of the case histories described by Layton.

Laundry Marks Found

The case involved a 15-year-old boy, who was convicted in Juvenile Court of raping a Washington wife in a car on August 20, 1949, and stealing a wallet containing $30. The identity of the rapist was learned only after checking the laundry mark on a handkerchief found on the floor of the car, Layton said.

Fischbach asked Layton if any law required the use of laundry marks in Washington. Layton replied such a law would be "a step forward in the protection of society." Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives, testified such a law would be "very helpful."

Twenty-nine Jailed

Donald Clemmer, District Director of Corrections, appeared briefly as a witness. He testified thta from July 1, 1948, to January 20, 1950, 29 persons, convicted under the Miller Act, were admitted to the District jail.

Thirteen cases were still pending, he said. Twenty-nine sentences were given out, varying from six months to 10 years. Forty-nine persons were released from jail, after being charged with violations of the Miller Act.

Twenty-one left under bond; eight cases were nol prossed, four persons were acquitted; four received probation; two were ignored by the grand jury; three were found to be of unsound mind; four were committed as sexual psychopaths; and cases against three were dismissed, Clemmer testified.

Interstate Crime Inquiry Is Approved by Senate Unit

not only gambling of an illegal nature, but any other criminal activity participated in through the use of interstate commerce."

The resolution directs the committee to find out "whether organized crime utilizes the facilities of interstate commerce or otherwise operates in interstate commerce in furtherance of any transactions which are in violation of the (State or Federal) law."

Identify Persons and Firms

It also authorizes the committee to investigate the identities of "persons, firms or corporations" engaged in the illegal operations and the resulting "development of corrupting influences."

The committee would be barred, however, from (1) recommending any change in the gambling laws of the various States or (2) any interference with the rights of the States in this field.

The committee report, filed later in the day, said the committee felt the investigation "should not be conducted for the purpose of passing on the merits or lack of merits of gambling and should not be used for the purpose of interfering with the rights of the several States to prohibit or legalize gambling within the borders" of the States.

Recommend Legislation

The committee would be specifically empowered to recommend legislation adequate to cope with interstate crime syndicates. It would report "at the earliest practicable date."

Senator Kefauver recently indicated he would call some of the top men in the rackets if the resolution is approved.

Frank Costello, frequently described as "the No. 1 Man of the American Underworld," recently said he would be glad to testify at any congressional investigation.

Costello offered The Washington Post's Edward T. Folliard $10,000 if he could find a slot machine owned by him.

"I never operate where I'm not wanted," he told Folliard.

Mayor Bowron Asked Law

Only last month, Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles called for a Federal antiracketeering law to help the big cities handle the problem of the tygoon.

Mayors of several big cities recently told Kefauver they were unable to control interstate racketeers because they can pass freely over State lines. They told Kefauver such racketeers are "corrupting" their city governments.

A continuing committee to coordinate the effors of local and Federal enforcement groups was created by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath's National Crime Conference two weeks ago. Another committee was set up to draft legislative recommendations to check racketeering operations.

Confer With Barrett

Kelly said he conferred informally with Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, about two weeks ago. He said he and Major Barrett agreed it would be a good move to have the Metropolitan Police take primary responsibility for the squares, triangles and circles. He said these arenow under Park Police control, but the Metropolitan Police cruisers pass them more often than Park Police can patrol them.

Kelly said there is now 100 percent cooperation between the Park Police and Metropolitan Police.

Kelly said the Park Police with a present authorized strength of 165, including 30 vacancies, would be able to do a good job of keeping the parks safe with 40 more police, for which a request is pending in Congress.

Kelly strongly opposed the idea, presented in a question by Fischbach, of having the Metropolitan Police take over patrol of the major parks.

Inspector Raspberry said the Park Police file on perverts and suspected perverts is "getting rather extensive." He said the usual practice after arrests is to charge such persons with loitering and to permit them to forfeit $25 to $50.

When Fischbach asked whether a system that lets perverts forfeit $25 to $50 without going to court would protect children, Inspector Raspberry said firmly, "No, sir, it would not."

Assistant United States Attorneys J. Warren Wilson and Charles B. Murray were asked by Rep. Smith to discuss whether the prosecutor's office or the court should decide on dropping cases. Fischbach pointed out previous testimony by United States Attorney George Morris Fay that the screening job is the prerogative of the court but that his office has carried it on for want of some court setup to do it. Murray said the system has worked satisfactorily for 50 years, and that the office neither welcomes nor rejects the function.

'Little Joe' Scheve Pays Tax

Theodore (Little Joe) Scheve, 30, Washington gambler who was recently robbed of an estimated $2000, has paid back taxes amounting to $19,451.61, District Court papers showed yesterday.

The Government announced in a notice at the court it was discharging Scheve from the lien.

The lien was for the years 1944 with a delinquent income tax assessment of $4241.06, for 1945 with $691.99, for 1946 with $13,364.25 and 1947 with $1154.31.

Scheve, whose alias was given as Theodore J. Henderson, has repeatedly been in the news lately.

He is presently out on bond from a one- to three-year sentence upon his conviction for setting up a gaming table at a big-money dice house formerly on Woodley pl. nw.

Scheve's father, who also was convicted of setting up the craps table in the Woodley pl. establishment, was shot and killed in a 9th st. poolroom a couple of months ago.

Police say that Little Joe was robbed of about $2000 while riding in a taxicab, but the victim has remained, like many gambling figures, outwardly taciturn about the deal. He did not formally report it to police.

Silver Spring Man Held in Robbery

Donald S. Garriss, 24, of 910 Heron ct., Silver Spring, was held yesterday for grand jury action on charges of armed robbery and carrying concealed weapons. He was arraigned before Trial Magistrate Harry O'Neill in Hyattsville Police Court, who set a total of $5200 bond.

Garriss and Raymond E. Wolfe, 24, of 7403 Flower ave., Takoma Park, are accussed of the robbery on February 15 of the liquor store of Sherlock Harrison, at Muirkirk, Md. Wolfe is free on $2000 bond.

McCarthy's 'Case 9' Just '47 Probe Slip

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

David Demarest Lloyd, who works for the White House, was glad yesterday that the whole story was out, and that there was no longer any mystery about "Case No. 9."

He felt that his own experience might possibly show the danger of having government departments turn over secret loyalty files to Congress.

Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.), didn't mention Lloyd by name, but he had him in mind last week when he charged that Communist Party workers were employed by the State Department, and that "a speech writer in the White House" had failed to get clearance from a loyalty board when he sought a job in the department in 1946.

Charges Daily Worker Link

Senator McCarthy said that Case No. 9 (Lloyd) and his wife were members of "Communist-front organizations." He said that "a relative . . . has a financial interest in the Daily Worker." After charging that No. 9 was not given clearance by the State Department, the Wisconsin lawmaker said he got a job in the office of the Secretary of Defense.

"And where do Senators think that man is today?" McCarthy asked. "He is now a speech writer in the White House. That is Case No. 9 . . ."

Lloyd had no doubt that McCarthy meant him when he read the speech. After consulting White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, he told his story, first, to Peter Edson of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, who had sought an interview. Yesterday he talked to other reporters.

This is his story!

He was born in New York City 38 years ago. He is married to the former Charlotte Tuttle, daughter of Charles Tuttle, a Republican, who was appointed United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York by former President Hoover. He and Mrs. Lloyd have two children, live at 2501 Ridge Road Drive, Alexandria, Va. and attend the Immanuel Church on the Hill (Episcopal).

Lloyd's parents were Democrats, but many of his relatives are Republicans. The "relative" mentioned by McCarthy as one with a financial interest in the Daily Worker was a well-to-do great-aunt, Mrs. Caroline Lloyd Strobell.

Aunt Became Communist

A one-time Socialist, Mrs. Strobell became an avowed member of the Communist Party. Louis F. Budenz, who resigned as managing editor of the Daily Worker in 1945 and returned to the Catholic church, told about her in his book, "This Is My Story."

Mrs. Strobell, according to Budenz, was one of three women who became "owners" of the Daily Worker after it was ostensibly divorced from the Communist Party. Of these three women, Budenz said: "They were classical examples of 'nice people' who were used to conceal undercover skulduggery against the Nation—a conspiracy of which they were totally unaware."

Mrs. Strobell died in 1941, and Lloyd recalls that the family used to say that "Stalin killed her." He has reference to the shock she got when Stalin entered into a friendship pact with Hitler.

Lloyd was graduated from Harvard in 1931 and Harvard Law School in 1935. An admirer of the Roosevelt New Deal, he entered Government service through the Resettlement Administration of the Department of Agriculture.

About this time, he joined the Washington Cooperative Bookshop, which offered books at a discount. He got out when he discovered it was a Communist-front outfit. He also joined the National Lawyers Guild, along with Robert Jackson, later to be a Supreme Court justice, and other New Deal lawyers. He quit this, too, when he decided it was too far to the left.

"Horrified" by Speech

In 1945, Lloyd went to Europe with the Harriman economic mission. Over there, he says, it became clear to him that communism was trying to block European recovery. On his way back in 1946, aboard the SS Washington, he read in the ship's news an account of Henry Wallace's famous speech in Madison Square Garden, a be-nice-to-Russia speech which cost Wallace his job in the Truman Cabinet. Lloyd says he was horrified by the speech.

Back in Washington, Lloyd talked with other New Dealers who felt the time had come to draw a line between themselves and the Wallaceites.

Out of this sentiment came Americans for Democratic Action. Lloyd helped draft its constitution, which has a plank forbidding membership to Communists.

About this time, Lloyd applied for a job in the State Department. While his application was pending, he took a job with Americans for Democratic Action, serving as director of its research and legislation division.

In 1947, Representative Karl Stefan (R., Nebr.) asked the State Department for an abstract of its files on employes and applicants for jobs, which were being studied by the House Appropriations Committee. Lloyd's file was sent to Stefan. It became part of the published hearings of the committee in 1948.

Recognized Case

Lloyd recognized his case in the published report, and protested to the State Department and to Stefan. John Peurifoy, now Deputy Undersecretary of State in charge of administration and security, apologized. He told Lloyd that there was no question of his loyalty, and said his file should never have been sent to Capitol Hill.

Representative Stefan assured Lloyd that his statement of protest would be filed with his record. Lloyd thought that was the end of it, and continued to think so until Senator McCarthy, two years later, picked up the old Stefan file and publicized it as Case No. 9.

In that two-year interval, Lloyd had quit his job with Americans for Democratic Action to do research work for the Democratic National Committee. This was in the summer of 1948. As the campaign progressed, he began working with Charles Murphy, then a White House administrative assistant, who was sending speech material to the Truman campaign special.

After President Truman's victory at the polls, Murphy asked Lloyd to join the White House staff. Lloyd was investigated by the FBI for a month or so, was cleared, and began working for the White House in December, 1948.

Fur budgetary reasons, he was placed on the payroll of the Department of Defense.

Assistant to Murphy

He is now a $10,305-a-year assistant to Murphy, who recently succeeded Clark Clifford as special counsel to the President. Like several other White House employes, he works on speeches, but his principal job is in the legislative field.

In talking about Case No. 9 last week, Senator McCarthy said he felt he was doing President Truman a favor by exposing his "speech writer."

"I do not think he knows it," McCarthy said. "I do not think he would have this individual there writing speeches for him if he knew it."

The story at the White House is that Mr. Truman knows all about Lloyd. Last fall he invited him to Key West, where Lloyd turned out some pretty good water colors.

Borroto Denies Asking Sander For 'Mercy' Death of His Wife

time, directly or indirectly, ask Dr. Sander to shorten your wife's life?"

"No sir," replied the slight, bespectacled Borroto.

Two prosecution witnesses earlier had quoted Sander as saying he administered air into Mrs. Borroto's veins at the pleading of her husband to ease her suffering—"eliminating her life if necessary."

Several times since Sander's arrest Borroto and his 19-year-old daughter, Elise, have called the doctor a "wonderful man" and both held him blameless in her death.

Spent Night at Hospital

Under questioning, Borroto testified he spent the night before his wife's death at the hospital and met Dr. Sander.

He said the dotor told him he didn't expect Mrs. Borroto to live through the night.

Borroto said he understood his wife was being given sedatives to ease her suffering.

He was still on the stand when court was adjourned until Tuesday.

Just minutes before Borroto was called as a State witness, Miss Elizabeth Rose, the nurse who treated his wife, admitted signing a statement that said:

"Dr. Sander did not kill her (Mrs. Borroto) as she was dead when this injection was made."

Saw One Injection, She Says

Miss Rose, who had been billed by the prosecution as one of their "star" witnesses, said she saw Dr. Sander make only one injection.

The murder indictment against him charges he made four air injections—each 10 cubic centimeters.

"If he had made more than one, I probably would have seen it," said the nurse in a signed statement offered by the defense. "To do so, he would have to remove the needle or unscrew it."

Chief Defense Counsel Louis E. Wyman won the court's acceptance of the pretty nurse's statements as evidence, even though they were obtained before the trial got under way.

Miss Rose had testified under direct examination she:

1. Saw Dr. Sander apply an empty syringe to the woman.
2. Heard a "louder gasp" as the needle pierced the arm.
3. Was told by Dr. Sander that he would notify her people and call the undertaker."

Under cross-examination, Miss Rose admitted signing this statement when questioned by a defense lawyer on January 2:

"I am certain that Mrs. Borroto was dead before Dr. Sander entered her room. She was cold and clammy. She had death pallor. She was not breathing.

"If I had to express an opinion of my own apart from what Dr. (Albert) Snay has said I would say that Mrs. Borroto was dead when Dr. Snay saw her.

"Dr. Sander did not kill her, because she was dead when this injection was made."

Earlier she had testified Dr. Snay, another doctor at the Hillsboro County Hospital, examined Mrs. Borroto before Sander arrived at her bedside and could find neither a pulse nor heart beat.

Counsel for Sander have said they would call Snay as a witness to back up their contention Mrs. Borroto was dead before given any injections.

$500 Reported Taken From 12th St. Home

Theolia Rouse, 22, of 1919 12th st. nw., reported yesterday that three armed men invaded her apartment and took $500 in 50-cent pieces from a piggy bank and two pistols from the room of her uncle, Tom Shaw.

Late Sunday night Wallace Simms, 45, of 86 Logan ct. nw., told police he was held up in his home in the same manner and robbed of $37 by two armed men.

as usual today but parents escorted their children to classes and teachers kept them inside buildings.

Weary officials rested only four hours last night in their hunt. Reservists of the United States Marines and spotter airplanes joined the stalking parties linked by walkie-talkie radio.

Fur found clinging to the six-foot wire fence around the zoo area inspired the hope that the leopard returned to the zoo last night for food and possibly ate the drugged meat. Two men said they saw the animal inside the inclosure after midnight and their report set off a futile search by floodlights.

Sheriff Newt Burns asked all farmers in the area to report any attacks on livestock.

"The leopard actually was seen from airplanes several times yesterday," Murphy said. "But by the time the men on the ground got there, the cat was gone."

U. S. Bans All Private Travel In Bulgaria

By The Associated Press

The United States followed up its break in diplomatic relations with Communist Bulgaria yesterday by banning all travel of private American citizens to that country.

At the same time, the State Department fired another burst of criticism at the Hungarian government for demanding the United States cut the size of its legation staff in Budapest.

Government officials said privately there is little the United States can do but comply with the Hungarian demand. They indicated they are studying the possibility of retaliating by a similar move against the Bulgarian legation here.

Press officer Michael J. McDermott said the department had canceled all passports issued for travel to Bulgaria.

McDermott said the order would not affect the estimated 60 Americans now in Bulgaria on private business.

Bulgaria is the second Balkan nation to be placed out of bounds for American travelers. Trips to Hungary were barred last December 20 when the State Department decided that the Hungarian Communist regime was not giving normal protection to American citizens.

In commenting on Hungary's demand that the legation staff be reduced, McDermott told a news conference that this "obviously forms part of the pattern of allegations" of spying made against the United States during the trial of Robert Vogeler, American businessman sentenced by a Hungarian court to serve 15 years.

He recalled the State Department had denounced the charges as false.

The State Department, he added, is drawing up a formal reply to the Hungarian government.

Truman Gets Nobel Prize Nomination

Oslo, Norway, Feb. 27 (AP).—Twenty-eight persons, including President Truman and Winston Churchill, were nominated tonight for the 1950 Nobel Peace Prize. Six institutions also were nominated.

The names of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, prime minister of India; Herbert V. Evatt, former foreign minister of Australia and former president of the United Nations Assembly; King Paul I of Greece; George C. Marshall, former United States Secretary of State; and Dr. Ralph Bunche, who negotiated the armistice settlements in Palestine, also were included on the list released by the Nobel Peace Prize Institute.

Others included Dr. Albert Schweitzer, world-famed philosopher, musician and medical-missionary; Robert Hutchins, chancellor of the University of Chicago; and Clarence Streit, a back of "Union Now" for international cooperation.

Institutions nominated included the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund and the World Movement for World Federal Government.

Styles Takes Office As Member of NLRB

Paul L. Styles, 43, was sworn in yesterday as the fifth member of the National Labor Relations Board.

Styles, who succeeds J. Copeland Gray, whose term expired in December, will serve a five-year term. He is former director of the board's regional office at Atlanta.

Wide Purge Is Reported In Bulgaria

Rome, Feb. 27 (AP).—Bulgaria's Communist rulers are terrified of losing their power and are putting the country to a perpetual purge, a source familiar with Bulgarian conditions reported today.

The informant said the government apparently has been "scared to death of its hold over the country" since the death of Premier Georgi Dimitrov in Moscow last July.

Thousands of citizens, suspected of being politically unreliable, have been rounded up in recent months and shipped out of Sofia, he reported. During the past year there has been evidence that large groups of civil servants have been affected by the mass transfers "into the provinces" where they are put to work in labor camps.

Western observers expect another major political trial soon, this source said, with Anton Yugov, former Communist deputy premier, a Politburo member and a friend of Dimitrov, as the central figure. He probably will be charged with "collaboration with the Americans."

Another political trial of military figures may already have been held in secret, the informant added. He speculated that Gen. Ivan Kinov, former chief of staff, may have been the central defendant.

This source said "if the Russians feel they cannot control the Balkan nation with Bulgarian nationals in charge, then they undoubtedly will bring in additional Russians to do the job."

The Russians may already have taken over the Ministry of Transport "lock, stock and barrel," he added.

The picture furnished by this informant checked in several ways with reports of Bulgarian conditions given by United States Minister Donald Heath, who left Bulgaria Saturday after the United States broke relations with the Sofia government.

Heath said he had a third-hand report Yugov was under arrest. He also gave his opinion that Russia may eventually absorb the country into the Soviet Union.

Slavs to Keep Trieste Zone

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Edvard Kardelj warned the three big Western Powers and Italy today that Yugoslavia will never give up her zone in the Territory of Trieste.

Speaking to a crowd of 25,000 at the Slovene industrial center of Marieor, Kardelj lashed out at "some Italiar and Chauvinist imperialist circles who think their time has now come to grasp the Free Territory of Trieste."

The preelection address by Kardelj in his native republic of Slovenia was made yesterday, but released for the first time tonight.

"All the screaming about the so-called persecution of the Italian population in Zone B (the Yugoslav zone) is a gross slander with the object of concealing the fact that the Italian chauvinists are attempting to grab Slovene and Croat territory in Zone B," Kardelj said.

"It is a fact, however, that Slovene schools are being closed, that the Slovene press is being persecuted, that members of the Slovene minority are being persecuted and killed."

(Apparently Kardelj was referring here to alleged incidents in the zone occupied by the United States and Britain, in which Italians predominate.)

Tightening of Links With Europe Studied

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Administration policy-makers are studying a new way to tighten American links with western Europe and to strengthen the free Atlantic community.

This is to use the hitherto-neglected Article 2 of the North Atlantic Treaty, which calls for closer political and economic cooperation among the member nations.

If the present studies lead to action, the foreign ministers of the 12 Altantic Pact countries will meet in the spring and make a real effort to concert their diplomacy and their foreign economic policies.

Accent Has Been Military

Up to now the accent in North Atlantic Treaty relationships has been on military defense. The North Atlantic Council, made up of the foreign ministers, has held two meetings, but each one has been a routine session in which the ministers rubber-stamped decisions recommended by their military advisers.

In recent week there have been signs that some western European governments and their peoples are interpreting the treaty as just a military alliance, and are losing interest in it. But the sponsors of treaty always argued that it was much more than a military alliance. Article 2 of the treaty says:

"The parties will contribute toward the further development of peaceful and friendly international relations by strengthening their free institutions, by bringing about a better understanding of the principles upon which these institutions are founded, and by promoting conditions of stability and well-being.

Common Propaganda Policy

"They will seek to eliminate conflict in their intenational economic policies and will encourage economic collaboration between any or all of them."

The first part of this pledge, if taken literally, could lead, for example, to a common propaganda policy in the cold war, to the mutual use of radio transmitters for short-wave broadcasts, and to a concerted political defense against the Soviet Union.

The latter part would enable the Foreign Ministers to push the work of economic integration, now being attempted by the economic experts of the Marshall Plan organization in Paris. It would also entitle the Foreign Ministers to discuss some of the stubborn problems of the "dollar gap" which have been baffling British and American negotiators since last September.

There is no thought at the moment of entangling the Foreign Ministers directly in these economic problems. But there is definitely a feeling in high quarters here that the pact has not yet been used to its full extent.

Master Plan for Diplomacy

Some American policy-makers believe Article 2 of the treaty can be used to work out a "master plan" of diplomacy strategy in the cold war, just as the military chiefs of staff did last year in formulating a "master plan" of military strategy in the event of an attack against any of the signers.

Article 2 was not always popular in official Washington. Originally the Canadian government insisted on having it as proof that the treaty was something more than just a military alliance.

Lester B. Pearson, the Canadian Minister for External Affairs, and Ambassador Hume Wrong argued so persuasively for it, against strong opposition in the State Department, that something like the present Article 2 was included in the treaty draft.

The draft ran into trouble when it was shown to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee early last year. Senators of both parties objected that it might mean European interference in race relations or tariff policy here, and the committee wanted it struck out of the draft.

But the Canadians held their ground in subsequent negotiations, and they had their way. The Foreign Relations Committee then issued a report saying that Article 2 was just a "reaffirmation of faith" and did not commit the United States in any way that would require new legislation.

Committee Told France Can Go Alone by 1952

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, considering authorization of funds for a third year of the Marshall Plan, yesterday looked at a bright and dark spot in European recovery.

The bright spot was France. Barry Bingham, chief of the Economic Cooperation Administration mission to that country, told the committee he believed France would be on its own feet, freed from the need of special American assistance, by 1952.

He cited great progress in industrial and farm production, improved tax collections, stabilized internal finances and weakened Communist influence as milestones on the recovery road.

Major Problem Remains

A major problem still to be solved, however, is "continuing political instability," Bingham said. "France has been unable to constitute a strong central authority."

A darker picture was that of Western Germany, described to the committee by the ECA mission chief there, Robert M. Hanes. He made no predictions, but his mere listing of the economic problems faced by Germany was enough to reveal the size of the trouble.

Only one-tenth of Western Germany's dollar imports are covered by its imports to the dollar area, Hanes said.

Next, he pointed out, West Germany was never able to raise more than 65 percent of its food requirements, and it is not even raising that now. German farm methods are "antiquated," he said, and agricultural research and extension work have been "grossly inadequate" for the last 15 years.

Its businessmen still think "in terms of a small turnover at a high profit, rather than of large production at low profit margins."

10 Pct. of Labor Force Idle

There is an acute shortage of capital investment, unemployment runs as high as 10 percent of the total labor force, at least five million homes are needed, but the building industry is laying off workers.

Each month there is an influx, mostly undigestible, of about 20,000 refugees from the Eastern Zone of Germany and other Iron Curtain areas. German people are resentful of them and they swell the numbers of the unemployed.

Unless something is done about this situation it will be impossible "to avoid unrest and development of extremist political thinking," Hanes said.

In response to questions, Hanes said he did not believe the Germans would ever choose unification, much as they desired it, if it had to be under Russian domination.

And, he added, unification seemed to him impossible as long as Russia held on to Eastern Germany.

An effort, by a group of American lawyers recently sent to Germany, is being made to break up German cartels, Hanes told the committee.

The committee proposes to end its hearings today on the ECA request for $2,950,000,000 for fiscal 1951 funds. A group of non-Governmental witnesses, mostly pro-Marshall Plan, will be heard.

Meantime, the House Foreign Affairs Committee will continue hearing from ECA mission chiefs this morning, and the House Appropriations Committee at the same time will begin its sessions on the actual granting of the funds.

ECA officials, occupied at these hearings, also begin a series of conferences today with Dr. Kirk U. Stikker, newly appointed "political conciliator" of the European Marshall Plan central body.

Stikker will meet with President Truman at noon today, and from then until Thursday night has a series of conferences, lunches and dinners scheduled with ECA Chief Paul G. Hoffman, ECA Roving Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and State Department and congressional leaders.

Control of Asia Lost, Lattimore Declares

New York, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Owen Lattimore, former United States Government Far Eastern expert, today said that Europe has lost control of Asia forever and neither Russia nor the United States will be able to control the politically regenerated continent.

Writing in the United Nations World, an unofficial publication not connected with the UN, Lattimore said:

"We face a change in the distribution of power, which means that Europe will never regain its old power over Asia and will probably lose most of what power it has. Experience in China is a warning that very little of Europe's former power over Asia has passed into the hands of the United States. Other evidence indicates that Russia's ability to puck up and exercise power over Asia is probably also very much limited.

"The run of the evidence is that something much bigger has taken place: namely, the rise of an Asia which cannot be controlled either from the West or from Soviet Russia."

Lattimore, director of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations at Johns Hopkins University, was deputy director of Pacific operations of the Office of War Information and member of the United States Reparations Commission to Japan.

He said that Russia's intervention in the Chinese civil war, "in the way of supplying either munitions or political and military advisers, was insignificant. Whatever the Russian strength, it remains behind the Russian frontier—undeployed, unexposed, a card unplayed."

"There has been so colossal an upheaval within China, in Chinese terms without benefit of Russian intervention," he wrote, "that we can no longer analyze the China of today by use of the concepts which were adequate for analyzing the China of the Boxer Rebellion just half a century ago. This change has been so great that it could not be prevented by an American intervention measurable in money . . . by an expenditure of some 3 billion American dollars."

Chiang May Resume Office This Week

Taipei, Formosa, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Sources close to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek said today that, "barring a last-minute change," Chiang would announce Wednesday his return to the presidency.

The sources, high members of the Kuomintang, said there probably would be a brief statement by Chiang and an announcement by Acting President Li Tsung-jen that he is retiring.

The sources said Li would serve as vice president, his post before he succeeded Chiang a year ago. Li is in the United States for medical treatment. His constitutional right to be absent from his office expires March 5, three months after he left China.

Red General Asks Aid Of Tibetan People

Hongkong, Feb. 27. (U.P.)—Chinese Communist Commander-in-Chief Gen. Chu Teh has asked the Tibetan people to build some roads so that Chinese Red Army troops can march into Tibet, Peiping radio said today.

The radio said a delegation of Tibetan leftwing leaders visited Chu and handed him a letter expressing the "yearnings of the Tibetan people for early liberation of Tibet."

Chu, in his reply, "expressed hope the Tibetan people would assist the Peoples Liberation Army by carrying out road repairs transporting grain and helping overcome all the difficulties which stand in the way of speedy liberation of Tibet," the radio said.

Hindus Blamed By Pakistan in Bengal Rioting

Karachi, Pakistan, Feb. 27 (U.P.). Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan blamed the Hindus today for the recent terrible race riots in Bengal and said Pakistan is "fully prepared for war" if India wants to fight.

In a press conference statement, Liaquat Ali Khan said rioting in Bengal between Moslems and Hindus started in Indian territory as the direct result of Hindu incitement.

He said 221 persons were killed and 276 wounded in the Pakistan area of Bengal alone.

Liaquat Ali Khan said a statement by Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru was a threat to Pakistan and continued:

"Our policy is to live and let live. On the other hand, if India wants war she will find us fully prepared. We value our freedom more than we value anything else in the world."

Running To Congress

It is regrettable that Congress has now become the forum for the debate between the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission over the proposed East Capitol Street Bridge. The House bill to authorize the Commissioners' scheme for the East Capitol span against planning commission objections is premature. It impedes further effort of the two groups to achieve a meeting of minds on this important detail of the city plan, and in effect it makes the planning commission nothing but a fifth wheel.

Actually the Commissioners must bear much of the responsibility for the impasse. When the Highway Department plan for the new bridge was drawn up last fall, the NCPPC was not consulted. Later Engineer Commissioner Young requested a delay in planning commission action; yet before the planning body even considered the proposal, the Commissioners officially indorsed the East Capitol Bridge and asked funds from Congress. This short-circuiting naturally provoked fire at the January meeting of the planning commission.

This newspaper has favored, without enthusiasm, the East Capitol span as opposed to the NCPPC plan for a bridge at Massachusetts ave. Our feeling has been that despite considerably greater expense and certain other disadvantages, the East Capitol Bridge would serve a larger area and provide more relief for other bridges. We agree with the planning commission, however, that any new bridge ought to fit into the over-all city plan. In this respect it is unfortunate that the controversy has centered on East Capitol st. or Massachusetts ave. as an either-or proposition.

The planning commission now makes a compelling argument that the East Capitol Bridge would provide only temporary relief. Whereas the Commissioners presumably envision no other bridge across the upper Anacostia between the present Benning Bridge and New York ave., the NCPPC advocates another crossing at M st. as part of its circular Fort Drive route. According to the planning commission, both the Massachusetts Avenue Bridge and the M Street Bridge could be built for approximately the cost of the East Capitol span. The advantage would be in providing better access for the new Washington-Baltimore Parkway. With no additional upper Anacostia crossing, the parkway would have to use the New York Avenue Bridge and come down the west side of the river. This would entail complicated and expensive railroad crossings, and also would cut off a substantial hunk of the National Arboretum.

These are serious considerations which ought to be explored, and before, not after, Congress votes any new bridge. What the city needs is less intransigeance among its officials, and renewed effort to settle planning problems before running to Congress. Bridges are permanent structures. They can hardly be authorized haphazardly, out of context of the city plan, without destroying some of the symmetry that distinguishes Washington as a Capital.

Alaska's Chance

Statehood for Alaska and Hawaii is at last scheduled for a vote in the House in two bills to be called up this week. This newspaper has commented several times on the eminent justification for bringing Hawaii into the Union; the case has in no way diminished. Alaska's petition seems to us equally justified. If anything, the importance of Statehood for Alaska has been increased by the Territory's strategic position in the national defense.

Alaska's military significance is as an air base—for the United States or for an invading enemy. Yet troops defending airfields there amount to only a corporal's guard. Although Congress has voted money for the military housing necessary to increase troop strength, it still has not appropriated funds for the vital radar warning screen. Much of this neglect may be attributed to the fact that Alaska has only one nonvoting Delegate in Congress. The Territory is still thought of as a remote and icy wilderness instead of as the strategic prize it is.

If Alaska is to become a really stable bastion of defense, then it must be settled and developed. There is much reason to believe that absentee Federal direction has hindered rather than helped economic and population growth. For example, Alaska's fisheries have been dangerously depleted under Federal control. Also, Alaska's road development has been slow because she has not received help under the Federal Highway Aid Act.

Yet Alaska has continued to grow to the point where her population now exceeds 100,000. This is more than the population of 12 States at the time they entered the Union. Even considering Alaska's great area, her population per square mile is greater than that of such States as Nevada, Minnesota and Oregon at the time they were admitted. Moreover, she is closely linked with the remainder of the United States by air and the Alaska Highway. She has had 35 years experience in self-government as a Territory. Her educational system is well established. The House Public Lands Committee, after broad investigation, has concluded that she should be able to support herself financially under Statehood.

Alaska has been a United States possession for 83 years. During this period her tremendous resources—timber, minerals, power—and her great capacity for settling Americans in new homes have scarcely been tapped. On these grounds alone Statehood for Alaska would be a wise and just investment. Much more than this, it has now become a necessary factor in the defense of the United States.

Churchill's Choice

Mr. Churchill and the other leaders of the Conservative Party will meet today to discuss the parliamentary crisis in Britain. Will they be as inhospitable to the notion of national or coalition government as the Laborites? That all depends upon whether the spirit of party is in the ascendant in Mr. Churchill's mind. The party spirit would be served by staying on the sidelines, holding a sword of Damocles over the head of the Labor majority, ready at any moment to let it fall on Mr. Attlee and his colleagues and so force a new election at Churchill's leisure and discretion.

More than the trend is in favor of Mr. Churchill. He will get the advantage of any post-election bickering that may break out in Labor's ranks between the left wingers and the right wingers. The left wingers are under Mr. Aneurin Bevan, the fiery former miner from Wales; they were kept out of the counsels of the party managers in planning the campaign. They wanted but did not get a vigorous crusade for more and more nationalization. The party managers, of whom Mr. Herbert Morrison is chief, pitched the appeal to the electorate, instead, upon digestion and consolidation.

As to rival Labor tactics, only those who know the present temper of the British people can have the answer. It looks, however, as if Mr. Morrison was right and Mr. Bevan wrong. The voting statistics furnish something of a proof. No less than 85 percent of the eligible population cast ballots, or around four million more than in 1945 Of this number the Liberals picked up a quarter of a million, Labor less than 1.5 million, and the Conservatives more than 2.5 million. These data don't show any desertions from Labor because the party appeal failed to carry the dynamic punch that Mr. Bevan represents. With the reservation that the figures are not yet at hand in detail, the inference is that what happened was that the Conservatives got out their vote. It is known that in 1945 the Conservatives were relatively lethargic, and let some of their traditional seats go to Labor out of sheer default. They failed to realize the almost American-style organization that Labor had developed. This time they were more energetic, and their supporters were more dutiful; and the wide switch in seats indicates a recapture of former Conservative strongholds. These seats appear bound to stay Conservative in any renewal of a test of strength, and to be joined by others if the Labor Party presents a spectacle of impotence and intra-party squabbling in the coming Parliament.

Thus, from a party standpoint, Mr. Churchill and the Tory stalwarts are sitting pretty. A hobbled government is up their alley, party-wise. But the prospect is disquieting to the transatlantic onlooker as he sees time and opportunity balked of action. If ever there were a time when strong government in England were needed, it is now. Only strong governments capable of making new and bold and confident decisions can develop a strong and united Europe. To promote this strength the United States has invested its treasure and its support. It has entered into an alliance with the western Europeans, so as to ease the burden on their military budgets and to increase their sense of security. The alliance is making some headway in developing a single military organization. But the object of the Atlantic Pact was by no means military only. Under Article 2, as Premier St. Laurent reminded a New York audience the other day, it called for the elimination of "conflict in their international economic policies" and the encouragement of "economic collaboration." There has been no progress under this head. On the contrary, there has been retrogression and stalling. It had been hoped here that as soon as one or other of the political parties in England got a mandate from the people the creeping paralysis in carrying this article into effect would be ended. This prospect appears to be blasted by the stalemate of the British election and its implications.

These considerations must be present in the minds of the men who will deliberate today on Conservative policy. They should be weighed in the scales against the party advantage that will come from the perpetuation of feeble government and party conflict. It is a time for thinking nationally and internationally. Nobody knows this need better than Mr. Churchill, or the emergency in the Western World that points up this need. He came to America in 1946 to remind the United States of it. At Fulton he bespoke the fraternal association subsequently enshrined in the Atlantic Pact. He pleaded for "a new unity in Europe," on top of this fraternal association, so as to offer to the Soviet Union the "formidable superiority" that it would respect, a temple that would be built upon a rock instead of shifting sand. This need, he said, put upon all the free world "an awe-inspiring accountability to the future."

Mr. Churchill's words still apply, but in this instance to Britain, and he himself now has an opportunity, as he put it to us at Fulton, "to preach what we practice and practice what we preach." At this crucial period the call upon Mr. Churchill the statesman and leader is to get the politics of his country out of the quagmire into which its economics had already fallen, and show the way to the formation of a coalition government.

Potato Politics

Senate refusal to come to grips with the potato problem is a reflection of what is wrong with the whole farm program. Everyone talks about the anomaly of surpluses and high supports, yet when the time comes to do something about it the clamor for action suddenly vanishes. Senator Lucas, whose efforts to get back to common sense on the farm program deserve commendation, proposed an amendment to cut out all price support on potatoes until growers adopted vigorous marketing quotas. Yet the Senate instead voted the innocuous substitute of Senator Aiken continuing support wherever regional marketing agreements are in effect—which is practically everywhere—and it postponed operation of quotas until 1951.

What is most interesting is that Senate Republicans, who have done some of the loudest shouting, lined up in force against the Lucas amendment. Does this indicate that their opposition to inflated farm prices has been mostly talk? One would almost think that the Republicans were deliberately trying to furnish an argument for the Brannan plan.

The trouble with potatoes is not imports from Canada, as Senator Brewster would have us believe, or anything else except absurdly high supports. Potatoes are one of the few crops grown in all 48 States, and it is easy for most farmers to switch to or from potato production. The reason that potatoes are flooding the market, and costing the Government millions of dollars, is that there is no relation between demand and supply. Under the stimulus of high supports, farmers have made a mockery of acreage limitations by planting closer rows and using more fertilizer. Potato consumption has been declining for years, and lower market prices probably would not make much difference in this trend. There is utterly no justification for high supports; what is needed is fewer potatoes—and potato farmers. Indeed, it is questionable whether any support on potatoes is warranted at this time.

The same timidity afflicted the Senate yesterday in its vote against the Williams amendment which would have instituted the sliding support scale of the 1949 Anderson law immediately. Perhaps the greatest criticism of the Anderson law, aside from its pyramiding of parity standards, is that it postponed operation of flexible supports on basic crops and so hedged them that they could not be a real deterrent to overproduction. If there is any merit in flexible supports, why should they not be tried now? Or are they merely to remain a high-sounding but abstract principle, a monument to the unwillingness of legislators to face the issue and make the farm program what it should be—protection against disaster instead of a permanent peg for inflated values?

Contempt Case

As the trial of the United Mine Workers for contempt of court proceeds in Judge Keech's court, it is interesting to note some of the comments of the Supreme Court when the UMW carried a previous conviction for contempt to the high bench. Speaking of the miners' open defiance of the law the court said:

> This policy, as the evidence showed, was the germ center of an economic paralysis which was rapidly extending itself from the bituminous coal mines into practically every other major industry of the United States. It was an attempt to repudiate and override the instrument of lawful government in the very situation in which governmental action was indispensable . . .
> We well realize the serious proportions of the fines here imposed upon the defendant union. But a majority feels that the course taken by the union carried with it a serious threat to orderly constitutional government, and to the economic and social welfare of the Nation, that a fine of substantial size is required in order to emphasize the gravity of the offense of which the union was found guilty . . .
> Loyalty in responding to the orders of their leader may, in some minds, minimize the gravity of the miners' conduct, but we cannot ignore the effect of their action upon the rights of other citizens, of the effect of their action upon our system of government.
> The gains, social and economic, which the miners and other citizens have realized in the past are ultimately due to the fact that they enjoy the rights of free men under our system of government. Upon the maintenance of that system depends all future progress to which they may justly aspire. In our complex society, there is a great variety of limited loyalties, but the over-riding loyalty of all is to our country and to the institutions under which a particular interest may be pursued.

"A Master Stroke, Chief — This'll Drive 'Em Nuts"

Semiparalysis In Britain

By Marquis Childs

Until A New Election

THE OUTCOME of the British elections can give almost no one any satisfaction. The net result is that for the better part of this year Great Britain will have an insecure government suffering from semiparalysis.

A few Republicans and some Southern Democrats seem to think this is a situation which can be exploited to push socialism all the way out of the British picture. They are hinting that American aid should be held back to encourage the Conservatives still further when the inevitable next election comes up.

To undertake anything like that would be dangerous business. It would inject the issue of American aid and American partisanship much more sharply into the next contest. This might occur in such a way as to give the Laborites a definite advantage.

Administrator Paul Hoffman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson have asked for $2,950,000,000 in ECA aid for the coming fiscal year. Any sizable cut in that amount would be likely to mean a proportionately greater cut in the allocation for Britain.

Britain is not in precisely a robust financial state at the moment. There are American officials who feel that, on the contrary, the condition is one of considerable delicacy. The patient has begun to improve since devaluation, but convalescence is almost entirely dependent on spoon-feeding from America.

To slash the ECA aid by a third or a half would be likely to produce one immediate result—unemployment. In an election to be held in October or early November, the Labor Party could blame that unemployment on the failure of America to live up to a prior commitment. The failures of the government itself would be glossed over.

WITH A healthy majority and a renewed confidence, a Labor government might have set out to cure the suppressed inflation and take off some of the strangling controls even though this might mean a sacrifice of some of the fruits of so-called full employment. A Conservative government with a workable majority of 40 to 60 seats would certainly have undertaken to reverse many of the trends of the past five years.

Now there can be only a pause until lines are reformed and the voters permitted a brief respite from oratory. The new election can scarcely be earlier than May or later than November. Unless Parliament takes action to revoke it, the act nationalizing the steel industry becomes law on January 1, 1951.

If it were not so serious, there would be something almost comic in this spectacle of a great people caught on a knife-edge of indecision. All the members of both major parties will have to spend most of their time in the House in readiness for a possible test vote. That will be distinctly uncomfortable, since the House chamber holds hardly more than half the total membership even with standees. The new chamber now under construction will be almost as limited, since the feeling has always been that a small chamber nearly filled has a better look than a large chamber almost empty.

IN AT LEAST one constituency, Coventry, so many voters appeared that the ballots were exhausted. Latecomers were told that they could petition the King for a new election because they were deprived of the privilege of voting. The incumbent, Richard Crossman, who has moved from the left wing of the Labor Party to the center, squeezed through. The Conservative candidate, T. B. Meek, exploded in wrath, saying the government seemed able to find all the paper in the world for ration books but they couldn't find enough for ballots.

The Labor government will have to get some agreement on a budget due at the end of March. That will probably be the most that can be achieved before a new trial of strength.

In a time of grave uncertainty, Britain will in effect have no government. Something like the same condition exists in France as a result of the narrow margin by which the Bidault regime has been getting by. And here in Washington, what with the guerilla warfare waged by some Republicans and the long-standing battle between Executive and Legislature, we can scarcely say that we have a Government capable of coping with the challenge of a divided world.

There may be some small consolation in the thought that a democracy can survive without a strong central government. The habit of responsibility and self-discipline will carry through. In a dictatorship without a powerful central government, the whole structure goes to smash. But in times like the present, that is cold comfort indeed.

Filibuster Mockery

Ninety years ago the Dixiecrats were willing to disrupt the Union in an effort to erect their sectional prejudices into national principles. Their effort was defeated in the Civil War.

Today the Dixiecrats are willing to disrupt the legislative process and to expose the Congress of the United States to public ridicule and contempt by their filibustering tactics. This effort will likewise be defeated. But meanwhile what a mockery they are making of majority rule and how they are undermining popular faith in representative government!

"Of Greatness"

Your February 22 editorial tribute to George Washington keenly expresses some valuable insights into the elements of his greatness. But I believe there is room for a significant supplement to your summation.

In shying off from the classical epithet of "virtue," which as you imply was so stuffily revived by both the Encyclopedists and the purer of the French revolutionists in Washington's own century, you only revert to still another classical ideal, namely, that of integer vitae. Those essentially pre-Christian (or pre-Judean) criteria come dangerously close to the Babbitt mottoes of "mind your own business" or "honesty is the best policy."

No doubt recognizing the inadequacy of such apotheosis of mere integrity, you proceed to praise Washington's "absolutely impersonal, unselfish devotion." If the first characterization is too stiff, the latter is too sentimental. Fortunately, Washington was not devoid of self-respect and a fair measure of legitimate ambition, sufficient to assure the means of his significant service.

George Washington was a great man, par excellence, in that he was a noble character. His nobility consisted of a rare combination of effective self-identification with the better nature and better interests of his countrymen and humanity and a decent regard for his own dignity and efficiency in contributing to the common destiny. While no church fanatic, his diaries and other papers as well as his public and private acts of record testify that he reached over beyond mere integrity and religiously loved his fellowmen, without effacing his own personality.

Nor do I subscribe to your suggestion that Washington may not have possessed extraordinary talent for practical statecraft. To him alone must we be grateful for some of the soundest and most effective diplomatic judgment in history, as, for example, his steering an even course between the British conservative and the French revolutionary empires of his day, and building up his own budding country into a Nation and not a satellite. And his flexible collaboration, with both wings of his own administration beginning to sprout into rival parties, was likewise no mean feat.

Outlawing Strikes

John L. Lewis is either acting out a lie behind which there stalks the evil ghost of a wink and a nod, or else he is no longer the actual head of the miners' union, either de jure, de facto, or otherwise save as the hollow sham of a title without power. I suspect that here we have the case of a little man who has made for himself a Frankenstein.

That which is of importance is the welfare of the American public as a whole, now imperiled by a few vicious persons whose power so to do exists because of the inadequacy of our laws with respect to continuous maintenance of a sufficient supply of those commodities and services on which our present-day economy depends. That inadequacy is the result of two things—mental blindness on the part of most of our lawmakers as to those new rights which have accrued to the public out of our modern way of living wherein each person is dependent on things produced by others; and the chicken-livered cowardice on the part of a few who fear the adverse votes of a minority hell-bent on its own selfish ends.

The remedy? Outlaw strikes. Create national labor courts to adjudicate disputes between employers and employes, keep production going while such a court is considering a dispute, and make acceptance of the court's decision just as mandatory as is acceptance of a law court's verdict about possession of property rights in realty.

Protecting Witnesses

Mary Spargo singles out for brief mention in her story of February 23 the decision of the Senate to investigate Senator McCarthy's charges that a Communist ring operates in the State Department, and to subpena loyalty files on persons suspected of disloyalty.

What Miss Spargo dismisses as several hours of "trivial, sharp-shooting debate" concerned the attempt of Senator Wayne Morse to have the amendment to Senator Lucas' original resolution changed to protect individuals who might be charged with disloyalty in the Senate hearings.

Senator Morse practically exhausted himself in pleading for an amendment that would allow an accused individual to present his side in a public hearing. Notwithstanding the justice of this and the fact that only in this way is the individual protected against unsupported and malicious charges, Senator after Senator—all Republicans—rose to question Morse's suggested amendment.

It is only fair to add that Republican Senator Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Democratic Senator Lehman of New York seriously accepted Morse's reasoning and worked to modify Morse's amendment for the satisfaction of the Senate majority.

Federal Leave

Senator Douglas of Illinois wants to cut the leave of Federal employes from the 26 days now allowed to 20 days since we are working only five days a week instead of six days as we were when the 26 days were allotted. He fails to consider that we formerly worked only 39 hours a week (5½x7 hours) instead of 40 hours a week (5x8 hours) as we do now. In order to have all day Saturday, our work day was lengthened from seven to eight hours, resulting in millions of hours extra time for the Government and, since we are giving an additional hour each week, it results in 52 hours, or 6½ extra work days each year. A few years ago we were allowed 30 days annual leave; therefore, we are now working 10½ days more each year than formerly.

Furthermore, employes in industry are not charged against their vacation time an hour for every 15 minutes of time away from their task, which may be required to attend to business matters. Since many places of business are closed after Government office hours, it is compulsory that some hours during the year be used for the transaction of business matters. This results in whittling down of leave to approximately two weeks for vacation relaxation.

The cost of salaries of civilian personnel in Government services is less than 2 percent of the total cost of Government. Imagine then the huge (?) saving that would be effected by reducing the employes' leave by six days a year! INEZ JUSTUS.

"Atlantic Union"

Your splendid editorial of February 18 "Atlantic Union" presents a plan which deserves the consideration of everyone in this time of fear and frustration. A union of the free nations, within the framework of the United Nations, is obviously the best way to achieve the power which Government spokesmen say is necessary before we can deal successfully with Russia. It would unite the enthusiasm of the free peoples as well as their power behind the ideal of freedom, and make it invincible.

Certainly a convention of Atlantic Pact democracies, to explore the possibilities of union, is eminently practical and could be called at once. And, equally certainly, the long-range objective of spreading democracy and free institutions by later admitting other nations, as they become free, until possibly the whole world was included, is one "which captivates the imagination by its plendor."

Let us begin by urging the passage of the Atlantic Union Resolutions, S. 57 and H.R. 107-111.

"Dual Schools"

Please accept heartfelt thanks for your February 20 editorial "Dual Schools." This is the most lucid and logical editorial comment I have seen on this issue.

Negroes have the desire and believe they also have the right, to be treated as American citizens, not as Negro American citizens. We believe that any separate facilities — whether "equal to," below, or above the level provided for other American citizens—set us apart from the rest of the citizenry and, therefore, deny us the right of full participation in and enjoyment of our heritage as American citizens. We seek the elimination of such discriminatory practices not as Negroes, but as Americans. E. W. SHOED.

May I offer hearty thanks for your editorial. Its spirit of fairness and calmness on a subject that arouses such ill-considered fury is too admirable to be passed over.

Flagstad's Return

Paul Hume's article of February 19 urging public acceptance of the presumably regenerated Kirsten Flagstad rests its arguments on such feeble grounds one wonders whether Mr. Hume was not seeking to uphold the unconvincing opinion he has expressed at shorter length in the past.

Many of us thrilled to the outpourings from her throat, both in concert and in opera. But the ever-living echoes of her Isolde and Brunnhilde, the acclaim with which this Nation gave a place in its innermost musical heart to Flagstad, did not mitigate the disappointment, the feeling that we had been betrayed by this artist who had used us, and who had, with disdain for our democratic doctrines, returned to lend her esteem and her glory to the Nazi puppet government which had overrun her country.

It is a sorry commentary, on the imagination of manager Bing of the Metropolitan Opera if he would have us believe that in the 67 years since Wagner died, half a dozen comparatively unknown, but worthy operas, written by other composers, cannot be found to fill the spots he proposes for Flagstad presentations. DOROTHY LEAVITT.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Acheson's Political Vulnerability

IN ITS report from Washington the February Atlantic Monthly said that "the story of American foreign policy in the next few months will be in large part the story of Secretary Acheson's conflicts with Congress . . . Acheson's vulnerability on Capitol Hill is based on the fact that he has little political strength in his own right.

Lippmann

He is building a following by his force of mind and general ability. But he did not come into office with the kind of grass roots strength which makes a Congressman think twice before he attacks."

THE QUESTIONS raised here are important, and they are all the more interesting because the publication dates show that they must have been written before Mr. Acheson's statement after the Hiss verdict. That statement has complicated the question and has added to his vulnerability. But the difficulty existed before the verdict and would have presented itself had there never been a Hiss case.

It is a pity that the Secretary of State had to say anything about the case. But, as I see it, there was no way he could have refused to comment in view of the fact that more than a year ago, before he was confirmed and before Hiss had been brought to trial, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee forced Acheson to testify publicly about his personal relations with Hiss. Once we recognize the fact that Mr. Acheson did not of his own choice involve his high office in a criminal case, the problem of what he could have said, or should have said, or might more wisely have said, is in the realm, not of public affairs, but of private morals and of personal religion. I believe that it should be left there.

THE Atlantic Monthly report points out that Mr. Acheson's vulnerability on Capitol Hill is based on the fact that he has little political strength in his own right. That is true. In the normal American practice the President's first choice for his Secretary of State has not been a specialist in foreign affairs. He has been the man who, next to the President, was the strongest political personage in the Administration party.

Washington had Jefferson. Jefferson had Madison. Madison had Monroe. Monroe had John Quincy Adams. Adams had Henry Clay. Lincoln had Seward. Garfield and Harrison had Blaine. Theodore Roosevelt had Root. Wilson had Bryan. Harding had Hughes. Franklin Roosevelt had Hull. Truman had Byrnes. Some of these men became distinguished in the conduct of foreign affairs. But that is not why they were chosen in the first place. They were chosen because they had such political power in their own right that to leave them out was a political liability and to take them in was a political asset.

YET experience shows also, I believe, that in our system of government the President cannot in time of crisis delegate the conduct of foreign affairs to a Secretary of State, no matter what his personal political strength. The great and difficult decisions can be made only by the President himself, and the Secretary of State can only be the President's minister. Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, and Franklin Roosevelt made foreign policy. When the President has not done this, foreign policy has languished. Though Hughes was a far abler man than Harding, though Stimson was far wiser in foreign affairs than Hoover, they were unable to conduct a successful foreign policy.

The reason is that foreign policy has to be made in the White House; it can only be developed and administered in the State Department. Foreign policy has to be made in the White House because the high decisions involve not the Foreign Service alone but all the principal functions of government—the armed forces, finance, commerce, agriculture, and the party leadership in Congress. The Secretary of State is the head of one department among several. Only the President is the head of all the departments that have to participate and the head of his party as well.

BECAUSE of this, Presidents who have been strong in foreign affairs have gotten along with mediocre Secretaries of State. But the strongest Secretary of State will be in trouble—particularly in the time of crisis—if the President himself is not strongly and continuously in command of the conduct of foreign affairs. Only the President can bring all the departments and his own majority in Congress into line behind a decision in foreign policy.

If he does not exercise his peculiar function, the several departments will tend each to make their own foreign policy and his party will tend to become inert and divided. Only the President, as party leader, can deal with Congress on issues of foreign policy. For even if his Secretary of State is a strong politician in his own right, the over-all power of the presidential office is almost always necessary to impose party discipline.

NOW Mr. Acheson is extraordinarily well equipped by experience and bent of mind to be a minister of foreign affairs. Limiting ourselves to this century, it would be fair, I think, to put him in the small class with Root, Hughes and Stimson, if we measure him by intellectual grasp of the issues and by the integrity of his public virtue.

But there is no doubt that he faces graver difficulties than did Root, Hughes and Stimson, and he is confronted with fiercer political opposition. That, I think, is first of all because the situation he confronts is uniquely difficult and perplexing; second because he has no political power and only his personal gift of advocacy and persuasion to deal with Congress; and then, and most critically, because he is serving under a President who has sought to delegate to his Secretaries of State the functions that cannot under our system of government be delegated—that can be performed only by the President himself.

Capital Transit Asks Music Suit Dismissal

Capital Transit Co. moved yesterday to dismiss the District Court suit against transit radio brought by the Transit Riders Association.

The transit company said that the association failed to state a claim on which relief could be given and has no legal standing to maintain the suit. Also, CTC said that its activities are consistent with "public convenience, comfort and safety."

The Path to Health and Freedom

Regardless of difficulties, thousands the world over are finding there is a path to harmony and health — through the liberating understanding of Christian Science.

This pathway to freedom is open to all without exception by means of the transforming new spiritual understanding which a thoughtful study of

SCIENCE and HEALTH with Key to the Scriptures
by Mary Baker Eddy

plainly and unmistakably brings to light. A new light is cast upon one's life, one's lot and one's possibilities.

How is this helpful in everyday life? This spiritual enlightenment quenches fear, quickens hope and confidence, so that in a plain and practical way it truly transforms one's life day by day.

It restores harmony of mind and body, reveals capabilities before unknown, through the new-old Science of Christ, in exact accord with Jesus' teachings. It shows how to avail oneself of the true status of man as God knows him, thus bringing God-given freedom, which cannot be taken away.

House Probe Group Reopens Inquiry Into Hiss Associates

By the United Press

Rep. Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.), disclosed yesterday that the House Un-American Activities Committee has reopened its investigation of the Alger Hiss-Whittaker Chambers "pumpkin papers" Red spy case.

After a hush-hush committee session at which an unidentified witness was questioned, Velde said:

"We are investigating the activities of various individuals who were allegedly connected with Hiss."

Hiss, former State Department official, was sentenced to five years in prison last month on charges that he lied when he denied to the committee that he slipped Government documents to a prewar Communist spy ring.

The accusations against Hiss were leveled by Whittaker Chambers, ex-Communist operative and former senior editor of Time magazine. He produced microfilms of allegedly stolen United States documents from a hollowed-out pumpkin on his Maryland farm, where he had stored them for safekeeping.

Hiss is free on bond pending an appeal.

Velde said the witness questioned yesterday was one of several persons named by Chambers in secret testimony as being connected with Hiss.

The witness flatly refused to answer questions, Velde said, but may be recalled for public questioning—perhaps today.

Velde said the witness was known to Chambers under an alias. He could not be subpenaed for questioning before because "he could not be found previously," he added.

Velde refused to say how many other alleged Hiss associates are under investigation.

Velde complained that the committee is being seriously hampered in its work by President Truman's refusal to let Administration officials disclose confidential loyalty check files on Government employes, or give testimony about them.

This situation, plus the refusal of witnesses to answer questions, "impedes our work to such an extent that it is practically useless," Velde said.

that veterans would receive little less than $300 each under terms of the proposal; and that taxpayers must pay a little over $300 each to finance the plan; and that the veterans are the large part of the taxpayers and must bear the brunt of the bill.

"The only persons who will benefit," he said, "are the bankers who will get 15 million dollars in interest. I have been warned that it is political suicide to vote against this bill. I don't have such a low opinion of our veterans," Hyde said.

"Even if so, those veterans went out and risked their lives for us. If you would really benefit those veterans, I suggest you risk your political life to save the economic state of their State."

Prince Georges County Delegate George G. McLeish, in echoing Hyde's plea, declared. "If it's political suicide, then let it be political suicide. By God when the chips are down, I'm not going to waver. I'm going to vote against this bill no matter what they do to me in Prince Georges County."

At this point delegates heard one of their numbers say softly, "Good-by pal."

Delegate John F. McNulty (D., Anne Arundel), one of the sponsors of the House measure, pleaded for support on the grounds he was "no superman" and that the bonus question properly should be submitted to the people in the proposed referendum.

Delegate John R. Reeves (R., Montgomery) said he had served as legal officer for 17,000 Waves in the city of Washington during World War II. "If there is one single person on this floor who can tell me why I should vote a bonus to myself for serving for two years in that capacity then I'll vote for the bill."

Montgomery Delegation Gets First Bill Passed

By A Post Reporter

Annapolis, Feb. 27.—The Montgomery County delegation got its first bill passed by the General Assembly here today. The bill, introduced by the delegation early in the session, is an amendment to the express powers act, and gives the councils of charter forms of government additional powers to borrow money on uncollected taxes. The bill was technically amended by the Senate, the House concurring.

Meanwhile, two other measures of local interest moved up a step forward.

A bill introduced by the Montgomery and Cecil County delegations, increasing the salary of the Montgomery County sheriff from $3000 to $4800, and the Cecil County sheriff from $3000 to $3500 was favorably reported by the two delegations and passed the third reading.

Another measure, which would extend the boundaries of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission within Prince Georges County, was petitioned out of the House Rules Committee by joint action of the two delegations and referred to them for study.

Marshall Urges Youth to Defend Speech Freedom

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 27 (AP).—Gen. George C. Marshall today charged the youth of the world to "defend to the uttermost the right of men to speak freely."

This one responsibility of today's youth, "upon whose shoulders shall fall the burden of tomorrow's world . . . looms larger than all the others," General Marshall said in an address prepared for delivery to the four winners of the Nation-wide Voice of Democracy contest.

The winners, all 17-year-olds chosen from among a million students in 28,000 high schools, are Richard L. Chapman of Brookings, S. Dak.; Gloria Chomiak of Wilmington, Del.; Anne Pinkney of Trinidad, Colo., and Robert Shank of Lebanon, Ind.

Election Amendment Is Given Rough Time in Rules Group

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Lodge-Gossett constitutional amendment had a rough time before the House Rules Committee yesterday, and indications point to a tough time on the House floor, if it manages to emerge from committee.

The amendment would abolish the electoral college system of choosing the President and Vice President. It would split each State's electoral votes according to the division of a State's popular votes. The amendment, requiring a two-thirds vote for approval, already has passed the Senate. It still would need ratification by 36 legislatures if it passed the House.

After some sharp exchanges over what the practical political effects of the amendment would be, the Rules Committee agreed to have another hearing a week from today. But Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) said a vote probably would not be taken for another two weeks or so.

"Fearful of Amendment"

Sabath himself said he was "fearful" of the amendment. He asked Representative Reed (R., Ill.), who testified for the amendment, whether it wasn't true that "we've done pretty well so far" under the present system. Reed said the amendment was "one of the soundest" he had ever heard proposed.

The committee's four Southern Democrats—Representatives Cox (Ga.), Smith (Va.), Colmer (Miss.) and Lyle (Tex.)—appear likely to vote to send the amendment to the floor.

Representative Gossett (D., Tex.), the amendment's House sponsor, said he also feels it will win the votes of these three Republicans—Allen (Ill.), Wadsworth (N. Y.) and Herter (Mass.). But each of them separately told a reporter yesterday he hadn't yet made up his mind. Seven votes would be enough to send the measure to the floor.

Gossett said he had hoped for a much larger vote. But yesterday's hearing made it quite clear that, in addition to Representative Brown (R., Ohio), the three Democratic committee members with Administration leanings also will oppose it—Representatives Madden (Ind.), McSweeney (Ohio) and Delaney (N. Y.)

Brown expressed the same view as had Senator Taft (R., Ohio) in the upper chamber—that the Republicans would have a tough time ever again electing a President because of the disproportionate weight of the present lopsided Democratic vote in the South. Brown said a Republican would need "at least 52 percent" of the popular vote to win.

Calls It "Dangerous"

Madden called the amendment "one of the most dangerous things ever offered Congress," and a plan that "could ruin the two-party system" by encouraging splinter parties.

The rank and file of House members checked have indicated they know little about the amendment. One member who is an exception is Representative Case (R., N. J.), who is a leading opponent.

Case believes that the abolition of the unit rule or winner-take-all system of awarding a State's electoral votes to the high man would "be more likely to result in further restrictions of the franchise than in its liberalization. It would tend to strengthen the grip of the dominant party on the 'solid' States"—meaning the South.

Both Gossett and Senator Lodge (R., Mass.), the cosponsor, have argued that the amendment would do just the reverse, that it would open the South to the two-party system.

Dealers' Group Suspends Otis

The Clevelander had declared at a hearing February 10 that "important people" in the SEC were stockholders in Kaiser-Frazer at the time the 1948 K-F stock offering was proposed.

Frear told newsmen that Eaton did not bring back "enough information to require any further action."

Suspension of Otis & Co. and its two top officers—Eaton and William R. Daley—would prevent the firm from dealing in securities for the period. Membership in the association is required to do business under Federal securities laws.

"I am delighted with the decision," Eaton said, "because it gives us the opportunity to take them (the association) into an impartial tribunal and give them the works."

He did not go into details, except to say Otis & Co. will appeal "through any one of several legal avenues open to us."

"The decision today doesn't mean more than the wind blowing," Eaton continued. "Our competitors—the Wall Street boys—naturally would like to have us out of business. Otis has been in business for 50 years and will be going another 50."

In Cleveland, G. R. Miller, executive vice president of Otis & Co., issued a statement threatening court action against the NASD.

"This we realize will be bad news to the 17 New York banking houses who are under Federal indictment for conspiracy and who have been hoping to see the NASD eliminate Otis & Co. as a competitor," he said.

The New York firms were indicted in 1947 and the Justice Department charged them with violating the antitrust laws.

In announcing the suspension, the organization, which is made up of the Nation's stocks and bonds dealers, upheld a complaint against Otis & Co. filed by the organization's business conduct committee.

The case dates back to February, 1948, when the motor car company sought to sell 800,000 shares of its common stock. Otis & Co. along with two other firms, had agreed to underwrite the issue. They withdrew from the commitment before the stock was sold.

The case subsequently resulted in nearly a score of court actions, including multi-million-dollar damage suits.

The Securities and Exchange Commission also has held lengthy hearings to determine whether to suspend or revoke Otis & Company's trading privileges as a result of the abortive deal. A continuation of these proceedings is scheduled at an unannounced time in the near future.

Tydings to Ask Acheson for Loyalty Files

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) of the subcommittee to investigate alleged Communists in the State Department told the Senate yesterday he would ask Secretary of State Dean Acheson to turn over loyalty files and all other information on individuals named.

The Maryland Senator emphatically denied he had any "inside information" that the files would be turned over on request without the necessity of serving a subpena.

His denial was in response to questions by Senator William Knowland (R., Calif.), who pointed out that President Truman had volunteered to his press conference a few days ago that the files would not be made available.

Knowland said he would be "very happy" if the chairman of the special Foreign Relations investigating subcommittee had information the executive branch had changed its mind.

Holding up his hands, Tydings said, "I have no such information." He said that nevertheless he would proceed upon the assumption that his request would be met promptly.

After a closed meeting of the subcommittee followed by a session of the full Foreign Relations Committee, Tydings brought in a resolution on subcommittee procedure. He wanted, he said, to know clearly how the Senate wanted the subcommittee to proceed.

Under the subcommittee resolutions, persons who had left or been discharged from the Government service would have been excluded.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) objected that the Senate original resolution creating the subcommittee did not so limit the inquiry.

Ferguson pointed out that under the subcommittee plan individuals who had left the State Department "only a day" before the inquiry began would not be investigated.

After some discussion Tydings said the subcommittee would investigate all persons who would be named by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) regardless of whether or not they were still in Government.

McCarthy asserted in a Senate speech last week that 57 Communists are or have been holding down important State Department posts.

Tydings said there would be a full, free and fair inquiry, neither "a whitewash nor a witchhunt" and that the subcommittee did not propose the inquiry be used as a partisan political football.

The Department of Defense announced last night that six B-29 and three B-50 bomber groups of the Strategic Air Command are being reorganized to give them a 50 percent increase in strength.

Coplon Motion For Mistrial Is Rejected

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan today denied motions by counsel for Judith Coplon and Valentin Gubitchev for a mistrial in their spy conspiracy trial.

Judge Ryan handed down his ruling after declaring that Miss Coplon's action in switching attorneys in the middle of the trial was an attempt to disrupt "the orderly progress" of court proceedings.

The mistrial motion was made by one of the former Government girl's three court-assigned attorneys who were named to replace her former counsel, Archibald Palmer.

Judge Ryan accused Miss Coplon of not acting in good faith when she filed her application for a switch in lawyers.

New Accounts Plan Backed By McCarthy

Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) sought support yesterday for legislation which he said would make possible a 50 to 75 percent cut in the staff of the General Accounting Office.

He told a Senate Executive Expenditures subcommittee that his bill to overhaul Government bookkeeping practices also would provide Congress with "more and better information from the Government's accounting."

The GAO serves as Congress' watchdog on Government spending.

McCarthy said provisions of his measure embody recommendations made last year by the Commission on Reorganization of the Government, headed by former President Herbert Hoover.

The bill before the committee calls for setting up an office of an accounting general in the Treasury Department who would take over much of the authority now held by the Comptroller General.

McCarthy said Government agencies, "taking a viewpoint of expedition rather than logic," would oppose the proposal.

Textile Union Seminar Develops By-Product Of 'Grass Roots' Trends for Lawmakers Here

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A curious by-product has come out of the Washington Legislative Institute conducted here during the past six weeks by the CIO Textile Workers Union of America for 200 of its rank-and-file leaders from around the country.

Original intent of the "sightseeing" seminars, initiated last year by the textile union, was to give its most active local members an opportunity to see firsthand what makes the Federal Government tick. And on this score—according to Ben Segal, TWUA educational director—the experimental institute has paid off healthy dividends.

The current seminar, it has been discovered, is also serving a second, equally worthwhile purpose. Government officials and members of Congress alike are taking advantage of the visits by the union "students" to find out what's going on in the grass roots.

Last week, for instance, the institute class made up of student-delegates from textile locals over New England—met with Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) to hear him explain legislative processes. When the Senator was through answering the union delegation's questions on bills and law-making, he then began questioning them about the unemployment back in some of the New England cities like Lawrence and New Bedford, Mass.

At the end of the mutual interview, Senator Douglas thanked the "students" for helping orient his thinking.

"Back here in Washington," commented the Illinois legislator, "we sometimes forget what the situation is really like around the country."

One of the most active and energetic of the CIO affiliate unions, the TWUA has been especially advanced in arousing its 400,000 members into political action, not only on the national level, but on the State and community levels as well.

The institutes here is a pioneering effort in political action which is sure to spread among other unions.

Expenses for the four-day visit to Washington are paid for by the "student's" own local, together with the salary he loses by going to Washington. The delegates are elected by the locals.

Once in Washington, the class puts in four days of hard albeit pleasant "work." The institute's day begins at 8 a. m., with breakfast and a couple of informative talks by labor legislative experts, like John Edelman of TWUA, and a labor economist, like Bob Nathan, one-time economic adviser to the White House.

At 10 a. m. the class is on Capitol Hill attending a congressional committee hearing, or visiting their Congressmen, not to say "hello" but to ask questions and to get answers.

At 11 a. m., the students gather together for a lecture, such as "Changing the Rules in the House" by Representative Ray Madden.

Right after lunch, the class attends a session of the House or the Senate, but by 2:30 p. m. there's likely to be another meeting with an expert, like George Guernsey of the CIO Education Department discussing "Federal Aid to Education," or Wilbur Cohen of Social Security Administration talking on unemployment compensation. Later in the afternoon the students may get to meet a member of the Cabinet such as Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin.

Dinner is at 6 at the Carlyle Hotel, with as many as a half dozen Senators and Representatives on hand to meet the delegation and to give off-the-cuff talks on legislation. Right after dinner, the class meets again for more lectures from more experts—or foreign affairs, or on health legislation, on civil rights, etc.

As a rule, the institute begins on Sunday with a get-acquainted session and send-off discussions on "How a Bill Goes Through Congress" by Max Kampelman, legislative counsel to Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) The heavy schedules run through Wednesday night.

Montgomery County to Restore 'Lost' Roads

Montgomery County heads are planning a county-wide search for "lost" roads.

When located these "lost" roads, which have fallen into disrepair through disuse and neglect over a period of time, will be improved and made passable again, County Manager Irving G. McNayr said in disclosing plans for the search.

Unless restorative measures are used, he explained, these roads might be considered "abandoned" and revert to abutting property owners who dedicated them to the county. Most are in rural sections, he said.

Although the roads are little traveled now, the county wants to retain possession of them for possible future use in extending existing roads or for rights-of-way for new roads, the county manager said.

The survey must be completed by July 1, as under the proposed revision of the county's road ordinance the county manager is required to classify all existing roads by that time. He must also designate whether they are being maintained or have been accepted for maintenance.

The ordinance lists eight classifications of roads and sets up minimum construction standards for them.

The matter has not been fully explored yet, McNayr said, and it is not known how many such roads exist or what the cost of maintenance would be. Present plans provide simply for grading of the roads to permit vehicular passage, he said. Paving is not now under consideration.

The improvements would be carried out as a part of the county's regular road maintenance program.

Wolfe Says Year Can Bring Bomb, or Dud

New York, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—A leading American scientist today said it will take about 12 months to develop the first experimental hydrogen bomb.

Dr. Hugh C. Wolfe, chairman of the Federation of American Scientists, said that even then, "there is a fair chance that it will not work at all—that it will prove to be a dud."

The statements were made in an article in the magazine United Nations World, a private publication having no official connection with the U. N.

Wolfe said flatly that the H-bomb "doesn't exist at present, except as a theoretical calculation."

"It will take some 12 months," he said, "to bring it to the stage of the first experimental A-bomb set off at Alamogordo in New Mexico on July 16, 1945."

Another View

(On Sunday, however, Prof. Hans Bethe, one of the world's foremost contributors to basic nuclear science, said his "best guess" was that a minimum of three years would be required to make the H-bomb.

(Bethe, in company with three other outstanding atomic scientists, participated in a University of Chicago Round-Table radio broadcast.

(The answer, it appeared, was as much or as little as you want, depending on what you put into the bomb.

(Szilard explained that the resultant radio-activity from a deuterium—hydrogen variant or isotope—bomb would not be particularly dangerous. But, he said, if other material—cobalt, for instance—were put in the bomb with the deuterium, the cobalt would be made radio-active by the neutrons given off in the explosion.

(Cobalt, irradiated by about 500 tons of deuterium, would be sufficiently lethal to kill every person on earth, Szilard said. Editor's note.)

"Technically Possible"

But Wolfe said that prophesies that a hydrogen-bomb war would annihilate all living matter "are far more in the realm of the technically possible than in the realm of the realistically probable."

Wolfe's article said, "Life is hard to get rid of altogether.

"To be sure, vast devastation on a scale never before imagined can make great areas unfit for human habitation. Radioactivity released by an H-bomb explosion could probably extinguish most, if not all, forms of animal and vegetable life within limited areas. But . . . even after a full-scale H-bomb war, it is not likely that all the people of a particular land mass or continent will be dissolved.

"Some suggestion has been made that the large-scale use of H-bombs might so poison the atmosphere with radioactivity as to make human life on this planet impossible. If it can be shown that this is a valid prediction, we may expect that the H-bomb will never be used. Mass suicide does not appeal even to dictators."

Wolfe said Russia would have a "great advantage" in an H-bomb war for two reasons:

1. Russian industries are not crowded in big cities like American plants.

2. The American people are accustomed to a higher standard of living. A breakdown of water supply and other facilities "would tend to paralyze the American people both materially and psychologically" while the Russian people could "live on roots" and "sleep in the forest."

On the other hand, Wolfe said, the United States lead in technology gives it a "comparative advantage" in H-bomb manufacture and development of carriers to deliver the dread weapon. However, recalling that this country underestimated Russian ability on A-bomb development, Wolfe added:

"We have no sound basis for predicting that we will be ahead of them in the development of the H-bomb."

School Romance Leads to Wedding

Henderson's Daughter Wed

Dodgers' farm system, the bridegroom was named all-city high school center fielder in 1944, 1945, and 1946. Later, he played sandlot ball here. He was a star on the Heurich Brewers baseball team which was District champion and runner-up for the All-America Amateur Baseball Association championship in 1947. He turned professional in 1948. He also played high school basketball and football.

The elder Castro said last night that his family and the Henderson family have become good friends through the newlyweds. All members of both families who were in the city were present at the wedding.

"It was terribly exciting," Mrs. Henderson said, but she commented wistfully that "it wasn't quite the way I had dreamed of seeing my daughter married."

Charge Deferred, But This One Goes To Jail Anyhow

That early morning "bracer" led to an awful letdown later yesterday in municipal Court for Albert L. Smith, 1228 15th st. nw.

Smith appeared before Judge George D. Neilson charged with simple assault. His walk was somewhat unsteady and his court-appointed attorney, Thomas David, told the judge: "We can't try him, your honor, this man is drunk."

Smith admitted he "got up and took something to drink" earlier in the day.

Neilson sentenced him to 10 days for contempt. The assault case was deferred.

One on the Aisle—

Big Gayety Lobby A Boon to Gallery

By Richard L. Coe

THE "NEW" GAYETY is beginning to look right nice.

The 1500-seat auditorium has a new color scheme of green and gold. Fresh paint is on all the walls; even the asbestos curtain looks fresh and clean. Rugs will soon be down on the aisles and drapes in back of the boxes.

There are new seats on the balcony floor and the plan is to put new ones in soon on the orchestra floor, shifting the ones there now to the second balcony.

That second balcony, like all second balconies, is pretty steep and at the moment there are benches, with straight backs, up there. My 5 feet 10 fits into them comfortably, but for once I'd rather not be much taller. Still, the sight lines look okey.

Backstage is freshly whitewashed and painted, too. The dressing rooms overlook the stage on stage right and it must be, according to Jimmy Lake, some 44 feet from footlights to back wall. Below stage there is room for chorus dressing rooms.

The 9th st. front has been freshly painted, black, dark brown and white. The lobby is spacious, much larger than the National's, and it will be possible for the second balcony crowd to mingle with the tonier set during the intermission, which wasn't always the case in old theaters of the two-balcony type.

Approached from F st., the more rugged aspects of this Street of the Broken Heads are not too apparent, though the house next door is plugging movie burlesque with garish, near-neked ladies out front. But, when you consider that a lot of the country's legitimate theaters outside New York are in rugged neighborhoods and that Ninth st. isn't really as bad as it sometimes looks, there's no reason to be aloof about going to the theater at the Gayety.

Just what will be booked in to follow the two-week engagement of Susan Peters in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" which starts next Monday, no one's willing to discuss. But the advance for Miss Peters is over $8000 and opening night seats are virtually gone.

WHO IS YOUR favorite Mother-Daughter Team? . . . The Capitol Theater is asking . . . Any friend or member of the family may enter this contest for "Washington's Most Charming Mother and Daughter" by sending their photo or snapshot and filling out forms now available at the Capitol, Palace and Columbia or at either Hecht store . . . It's a Nationwide contest with a potential 39-day cruise to Rio as the top prize . . . There are others ranging down to blouses, shoes and orchids . . . How come? . . . In honor of Ann Sothern and Jane Powell, mother-daughter combination in "Nancy Goes to Rio," opening Thursday at the Capitol . . . Nope, Ann and Jane are NOT related; just in makebelieve.

ANOTHER CONTEST brings $25,000 in gold to the Trans-Lux lobby, where it arrived for a two-day stay last night . . . This is the first prize for Jimmy Fidler's National Kids Day Foundation contest, having to do with a mystery voice and a Kids Day slogan.

THE CIRCUS is coming! . . . This year's dates for Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey will be Tuesday, May 16, through Saturday, May 20, so circle your calendars, kids . . . The big show moves up from Sarasota to open April 5 in New York; it goes from there to a Boston opening May 7 . . . Which means the Washington date will be the season's first under canvas, according to indefatigable drum-beater, Democrat and tourist, Melvin D. Hildreth.

TONIGHT begins the most important of the area's amateur life activities, the twenty-second annual One-Act Play Tournament . . . Thirteen groups are represented this year in plays ranging from Sartre, Chekov, Thornton Wilder and Lynn Riggs to excerpts from Norman Krasna's delightful "Dear Ruth." . . . Frank L. Baer, Col. Frank A. Derouin and Mrs. Wilson Ewart are the preliminary judges and they have four nights of sharp-eyed work ahead of them . . . The plays are given at Roosevelt Auditorium, 13th and Allison sts., and you can get seats downstown at Mrs. Stabler's in Brentano's . . . Tonight's players are from American University, St. Peter's Social Club and the Foundry Players . . . Curtain time's 8:15.

TO GIVE ITS own subscribers a look at their one-act entry, the Little Theater of Alexandria will preview its offering tonight at 8:30 in the Alexandria recreation center . . . This is Lynn Riggs' "Knives from Syria," with Paul Carmi out for another go at the Maud Howell Smith Medal, which he won last year . . . After the play, square dancing.

Postlude

Composers and Listeners Compare Notes at Library

By Paul Hume

Composers and listeners talked things over last night.

The scene was the Southwest Branch of the Public Library. Under the auspices of the music division of the Public Library, music by three composers was heard and discussed by those who wrote it and those who heard it.

Godon Smith of American University, Mark Fax of Howard University, and Bainbridge Crist, familiar figure in Washington music, allowed the audience to dissect their music in the perennial search for source and meaning behind the creative arts.

A sonata for clarinet and piano, three songs, and a vocalize for soprano were the contributions from Fax. His music is of the highest caliber. Within such traditional forms as that of the sonata he achieves new ways of saying beautiful things.

The melodic lines of his music are equalled by the varied vigor of his rhythmic schemes. He is an able exponent of his own music, playing the piano with skill and persuasive style.

Bessie Mayle sang his songs and made the vocalize a personal tour de forme. It is a striking work, difficult, and of surprising texture contrapuntally. We should have liked to have the opening rhythm developed at greater length or brought back again. All of this music is of rare power.

Crist's song and a brief Chinese dance are evidence of his personal feeling that beauty in music ended, for the most part, with the opening of the First World War. Cast in the romantic mold of the late 19th century, they ring changes on now outmoded conceptions of Chinese sounds.

Gordon Smith starts many kinds of pieces but they lack logical development or momentary allure. Perhaps it is a matter of needing more time to write more music before a personal idiom and message will emerge.

U. S. Funds Sought for Jet Airliners

The aircraft industry says American leadership in air transport may be lost unless Federal money is used to start a jet airliner program.

The statement came from DeWitt C. Ramsey, retired admiral and president of the Aircraft Industries Association, in a paper prepared for a House commerce subcommittee.

"This country is several years behind the British in development of jet and turbo-prop powered transport," Ramsey said. "Any further delay in getting started on actual production of such planes will decrease the likelihood that our manufacturers, despite their resourcefulness, will be able to close the gap."

Ramsey said it is up to Congress to act because the Budget Bureau rejected an Air Force proposal to ask separate funds to buy jet transport planes.

He recommended that the Government make available to manufacturers more of the knowledge of jet engines and airplanes developed by the military services. He also said jet bombers should be used for experimental operation as cargo and mail planes to develop the technique.

Critical American Gets Labor Camp Term From Czechs

Prague, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—The American Embassy revealed today that an American citizen had been sent to a Czech labor camp for a year for making remarks "derogatory to the Czechoslovak Republic."

The embassy said it had asked the Czech Foreign Office for an explanation of the case of Imrich Solar, New York City, a naturalized American of Slovak descent who came to Czechoslovakia to visit relatives.

Solar was arrested in December for making allegedly derogatory statements, one of which was said to be:

"We throw away better food in the United States than they eat over here."

2 Seized in Car Theft

Holliday, Pa., Feb. 27 (AP).—Two Baltimoreans, Irvin H. Donner, jr. and Thomas W. Holland, have been arrested here on charges of driving a car stolen from another Baltimore man, James H. Morley. The two men are to turned over to the FBI.

SCENE-STEALER: W. C. Fields used to make no bones about the fact that Baby Leroy was the worst scene-stealer that master scene-stealer ever played against. Here's Baby Leroy on the Fields lap with Alison Skipworth, actively involved in "Tillie and Gus," which joins Mae West in "Klondyke Annie" on the Little screen tomorrow. Nope, we don't know where Baby Leroy is now. Any ideas?

Child's Charge Holds Man for Grand Jury

Charged with taking indecent liberties with an 8-year-old girl, Joseph Thomas Fisher, 29, of 305 Tennessee av. ne., yesterday was held for the grand jury in $1000 bond when he appeared in Municipal Court.

The offense was alleged to have occurred in a movie house at 3950 Minnesota av. ne. last Saturday.

Nats Shift Training Activities to Tangerine Bowl

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—Ordinarily, the pitcher who soaked up 10 straight defeats and contributed only three victories all year would not be warmly welcomed in a training camp. Certainly, he couldn't hope for a salary increase.

But don't believe it can't happen. It is happening this spring in the Nats' camp, the case of young Dick Weik, in whom the Washington club believes it has a golden boy. With Weik are riding most of the hopes that the Nats will move up in the American League standings.

POVICH

On Weik's record of last year, there is no reason to be high on the youthful right-hander, unless those three wins and his total of 12 defeats are scrutinized. Then it becomes a more interesting story.

Because, when last seen in a Washington uniform, in late September, Weik pitched two shut-outs in a row, a four-hitter against the Browns, and a two-hitter against the Athletics. Overnight, he was a modest sort of sensation.

CLARK GRIFFITH boosted the pay of the 22-year-old lad from Peoria to give Weik what may be a measure of more confidence in his own ability to win. Griffith foresees Weik as a big winner for the club and doubts if any pitcher in the league throws as fast a ball.

The nice thing about Weik is, indeed, his smoking speed. He fogs his fast ball with all the leverage a 6-foot 4-inch giant commands. "He was worried last year by his inability to hit the corners with his pitches," said Griffith, "until we told him late in the season that he didn't have to fool with the corners. With his kind of speed, anything close to the plate will be swung at."

Unrecorded in Weik's 3-12 record were two beauts he pitched in exhibition games during the season. Both were against the Pittsburgh Pirates, and each was a four-hitter in which he went the route. Among his defeats were a 12-inning affair against Cleveland, and he lost a 2-1 game to Chicago.

DESPITE his mere 22 years, Weik has been on the Washington payroll for most of five seasons. The Nats picked him up for a bonus of a few thousand dollars when he was pitching for a Peoria high school team. Griffith got the tip on the big boy from a friend in Bloomington, Ill. An old friend, it can be added, who used to watch Griffith pitch for Bloomington of the Interstate league in 1887.

The Cubs, the Phillies and the Browns were also bidding for Weik. His mother signed the papers that bound him to the Nats. A factor in the deal was an invitation to Mrs. Weik to visit the Capital as the club's guest and a tour of the national shrines. That did it. That, and a check for $4000 for signing.

Weik couldn't win at Chattanooga, where they sent him. Too wild. Griffith brought him up to the Nats last season, nevertheless. The old gentleman, who fancies himself as a teacher of control, went to work personally on Weik. He showed him how to shorten his wind-up, and keep his eyes on the plate. He told him to forget about his round-house curve and throw the little hook with a fast-ball delivery.

"HE'S THE NICEST boy to work with," said Griffith. "Always hankering to hear us pick out his faults. And respectful, too." The latter is quite believable. Young Weik still calls the baseball writers "mister."

The best thing that has happened to him, says Weik, is the tutoring he got on his little hook. "Mr. Griffith got me aside and dared me to throw it in a ball game on the first pitch. He said I'd have better control of that kind of a curve than I had on my fast ball. I didn't believe it, until it happened. Late last year, I began getting the first pitch over for the first time in my life."

It's a big help to get the first pitch over, Weik was saying, "it takes the pressure off. They tell me Hal Newhouser was wild, too, until he came up with a curve ball. All my life I was trying to throw my fast ball past the hitters. Now I'd rather show 'em that curve. It's my new hobby, I guess."

Bob Feerick Gives Up Caps' Job for Santa Clara

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Bob Feerick, who never played on a losing basketball team until he started coaching the present Caps, decided yesterday to quit pro ranks.

Feerick revealed that he will accept a three-year contract to coach basketball at Santa Clara University, his alma mater. He will check in at the West Coast institution April 10 after finishing out the season with the Caps.

If Feerick's successor is selected from within the Caps' organization, Horace (Bones) McKinney appears to have the inside track. Popular Bones just lost out last summer when Owner M. J. (Mike) Uline picked Feerick after the choice had narrowed down to the two.

McKinney said last night, "I definitely would like to coach the Caps. That's about all I can say."

Bones Has Edge

Johnny Norlander, another original Cap, also has applied for the job.

Norlander said, "I don't think it will do any good, though. McKinney probably has the edge on everybody."

Feerick's announcement came as a surprise. Little more than a week ago, he insisted he would remain with the Caps next year.

Feerick arrived in town last night from Fort Wayne, Ind., where his two late goals gave the Caps an 81-78 victory Monday night, breaking a four-game losing streak.

"I've decided I'd be better off back home," Feerick said, "I've probably had enough."

Feerick, who underwent a knee operation last summer, has been averaging only 7.8 points per game and has played only part-time in most of his 51 appearances.

For the past month, the Caps have been playing as poorly as they ever have in their four-year history. In 15 games, they've won only 5. Their season mark is 26-32.

Still in Playoffs

Eastern leaders twice in three years and runnerup to Minneapolis for the BAA title last year, the Caps are in third place, 20½ games behind Syracuse. Second-place New York holds a 9½-game edge.

Still the Caps are 4 games in front of Baltimore and, with only 10 games left, are a cinch to make one of the four playoff spots.

Feerick wouldn't say he's discouraged by the Caps' showing of late. He insisted he was going back to California for personal and family considerations.

Bob Foster, youthful Uline general manager, said, "News of Feerick's resignation is a big disappointment to me. I hate to see Bob go.

New Experience

"I think he did as good a job as anyone could have with all the injuries we've suffered."

Regarding McKinney's chances as successor, Foster said, "Bones is in as good a position as anyone."

Foster said he had notified Uline at his Fort Lauderdale, Fla., home that Feerick was leaving. He also asked the Cap owner to make a decision on a successor before the April draft of college players.

Playing with a loser is something new in Feerick's long basketball career. Bob, 30 last month, was an All-City selection at San Francisco's Lowell High and received honorable mention as a member of crack Santa Clara teams in 1937-38-39.

Feerick broke into pro ball with Oshkosh in the National Basketball League in 1945 and was named "rookie of the year." He came here in 1946 and twice was picked on all-BAA teams after averaging better than 16 points per game. Last season, he was on the second team.

Selby's basket was all in vain, however, as Eastern won the game, 33-26. Looking on is Blair's Bob Wooten (40)

Tinker Field Goes To Pot; Scarborough Signs at Increase

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—The Nats, who were supposed to start spring training at Tinker Field on Wednesday, won't. They'll stage their first week's workouts on the field of the nearby Tangerine Bowl under a new order by Manager Bucky Harris.

Harris is glowering at the city fathers who permitted the Tinker Field diamond and outfield to go to pot for lack of watering and attention. With Orlando without rain since Christmas, and Joe Stripp's baseball school having made a plowed field of Tinker Field, Harris refuses to let his athletes risk their health in the place.

"Our own ground crew might put Tinker Field in better shape before the infielders and outfielders report on March 7, but at best it will be pretty bad," groaned Harris.

"I've probably made our pitchers happy by telling them they won't have to chase any fungo hits to get their legs in shape when we go back to Tinker Field," said Harris. "I won't risk them stepping in any holes and breaking a leg."

His pitchers will be expected to to considerable running, but not while chasing fly balls, added Harris. "When they are running, I want them at least to look where they're stepping and they can't do that if they're watching a fungo hit that's in the air."

Harris has been forewarned of what can happen, by the experience of Joe Kuhel, last year's manager. On the first day of spring practice in 1949, Kuhel saw two of his pitchers, Milo Candini and Ed Kleiman suffer wrenched knees from stepping into sandy holes in the outfield terrain while chasing fly balls.

Also annoying Harris is the explanation he must make to visiting major league clubs with which exhibition games are scheduled in Orlando.

"They are going to raise hell when they get here, and won't want to risk their stars like Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio on our field," he pointed out. "It's embarrassing to the Washington club.

There is even a mild threat that Clark Griffith will pull his team out of Orlando at the end of this spring season, despite two years remaining on his contract to train here.

But there was a somewhat more pleasant note for Harris in one of today's developments. His top pitcher, Ray Scarborough, came to terms for 1950. Scarborough signed after a short huddle with President Griffith.

He emerged from his salary negotiations with a "slight increase in his $17,000 pay of last season, after being threatened with a salary cut. Scarborough returned three contracts unsigned, before agreeing on terms.

THE DOZEN players already in camp are getting in their last two days of golf before Manager Harris clamps the lid on that game Wednesday . . . On the links today were pitchers Sid Hudson, Mickey Harris, Joe Haynes, Ray Scarborough, Dick Weik; Outfielder Sam Mele, and Infielders Sherry Robertson and Sam Dente . . . The arrival of Clyde Milan today rounds out Harris' coaching staff of Milan, Nick Altrock, George Myatt and Joe Fitzgerald . . . Farm Director Ossie Bluege is a visitor in camp after a trip to Cuba to square away the tangled affairs of the Nats' Havana club which won the pennant and lost money last season.

C. U. Wins, Plays for Tourney Spot

Catholic University kept alive its Mason-Dixon Conference tournament hopes last night, defeating Towson State Teachers, 61-47.

The victor, before 1500 in the Brooklyn gym, enabled C. U. to tie Baltimore U. for eighth place with a 7-9 record. They'll play it off at 8:45 o'clock tonight in the American U. gym.

Winner of tonight's game has to face top-seeded American U. in its first tourney start Thursday in Baltimore.

Forward Joe Della Ratta paced the Catholic win with 17 points, high for the night.

Catholic got off to a slow start and waited until a minute and a half of the first period was left to break into an 18—16 lead, which they held for the remainder of the game.

Herbie Jones Wins Decision; KO for Smith

Herbie (Biff) Jones, District lightweight, scored his tenth straight victory and his 17th in his last 18 matches last night at Joe Turner's Arena by outpointing Manuel Bizon, of Brooklyn, in one of four eight-round bouts.

Jones, making his first appearance at the Arena in quite a while, kept his left in the face of the invader too often to capture a unanimous decision. Jones weighed 138 and Bizon 135.

Gene Smith, the former National Golden Gloves champion, knocked out Manuel Batista, of New York, in the fifth of their scheduled six-rounder. Smith, in winning, had Batista on the canvas three times, for his seventh victory in a row.

Referee Charlie Reynolds stopped the fight when Batista failed to answer the bell after absorbing a fierce shellacking.

Julian Keene, District middleweight, scored an upset when he knocked out Al Winn, New York, in 1:01 of the fifth of their scheduled eight-round match.

Pat Thomas, District featherweight, added Ray Castillo, Cuban fighter, to his list of victims with a knockout in 2:08 in the fifth of their scheduled eight-rounder.

Pat had the Cuban down three times in as many rounds before a flurry of lefts and rights ended the battle. It was Thomas' fifteenth victory in 17 fights.

Nick Aguilita, of New York, made his debut, by taking a four-round opener from Paddy Bullock, of Washington.

Eastern High, St. John's Win In Metro Play

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Eastern surprised Blair and St. John's edged Arlington's Washington-Lee to walk off with first-round triumphs in the Star's Metropolitan basketball tournament last night at College Park.

Blair, loser of only three games in 20 starts, was topped by Eastern, 33-26, in a low-scoring game in which Franny Dyer and Ken Atchison led the winners with only six points each.

A last-minute basket by Bob Mattingly provided St. John's 35-33 victory over W-L although Bobby McLindon, fine little playmaker, was high for the Cadets with 14 points.

Eastern, walloped by McKinley Tech for the interhigh crown Saturday, 57-41, made a fine comeback against highly favored Blair. The Ramblers never trailed after taking a 6-3 lead, although Blair tied the game twice.

Dyer, 5-foot-9 guard, played a sparkling floor game in the fourth quarter to lead the Eastern spurt

Basketball Coach Figures Way To Make Little Men Count More

Boston, Feb. 27 (AP).—Al Grenert, former NYU and pro star who now coaches basketball at St. Anselm's College, Manchester, N. H., has a new idea to aid the little man of basketball.

"I'd like to see a line painted on the court 20 or 25 feet from the basket, running outside the circle which incloses the free-throw line. Any basket popped in from outside that line would count three points.

"It'll work, I know, 'cause we've tried it," he told Boston basketball writers and broadcasters today.

"I have four or five boys about 6-4. I put them on one team and I play with the others. In a half hour we beat 'em, beat 'em badly, by about 19 or 20 points.

"They scored more baskets than we did but we got more points."

For 1950 Season

Strike Zone, Pitching Mound Most Important Rules Changes

New York, Feb. 27. (AP).—Two minutes after spring training starts Wednesday, the baseball players in general and the pitchers in particular will realize they are operating this season under a new set of rules.

Baseball's playing rules were re-phrased and re-defined during the past winter. Both the majors and minors cooperated on the task.

The change which the pitchers will realize first is the one which says the mound must be exactly 15 inches high and must slope gradually toward the baselines. In the past the mounds varied from park to park and from day to day, depending on who was to pitch.

Another rule defines the strike area now as the space over home plate between the hitter's arm pits and knees "when he assumes his natural stance." A footnote points out that the natural stance for some batters is a crouching one, which is legal.

The crouch could cut the strike zone by as much as 25 per cent and it is expected that many upright batters of last year will adopt a new stance this year to heckle the hurlers.

Hank Bauer, outfielder who hit .272 with the New York Yankees last year, has announced he will hit from a crouch this year.

Another altered rule provides the catcher must keep one foot in the receiver's box when the pitcher is issuing an intentional base on balls.

Two minor changes say that a starting hurler must go five innings of a completed game to receive credit for a victory and that the pitchers are not permitted to apply rosin to the ball

Milwaukee Paper Says So

Shaughnessy Packer Assistant?

Milwaukee, Feb. 27 (AP).—The Milwaukee Journal said today that Clark Shaughnessy, the T-formation master fired recently as head coach of the Los Angeles Rams, is understood to have accepted the backfield coaching spot with the Green Bay Packers.

Gene Ronzani, the new Packer head coach, conferred with Shaugnessy in Chicago during the weekend.

Formal announcement of Shaughnessy's move will be withheld, the Journal said, until he makes a settlement with the Rams management. He was dismissed 10 days ago but his contract still has three years to run.

The Rams will pay the difference between his Los Angeles salary and his pay at Green Bay for those three years, the Journal said.

Roach Death Probe Concluded

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—An inquiry by the dtstrict attorney's office into the boxing match death of Lavern Roach, 24-year-old Texan, last week, was concluded today. Assistant District Attorney George P. Monaghan declined to make any statement "for the present...

The last person questioned by Monaghan was John Abood, Roach's manager. The boxer died last Thursday in St. Clare's Hospital after he was knocked out in the last round of a scheduled 10-round match with Georgie Small.

Kenny Washington To Try Baseball

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP).—Kenny Washington, 31, who quit pro football after 10 years because his knees gave out on him, announced today that he's ready to seek his fortune in major league baseball.

This debut of Washington, the rookie, was made possible through the courtesy of Leo Durocher and the New York Giants. He is scheduled to report to the Giants' training camp at Phoenix, Ariz., on Wednesday. He's shooting for a spot in the outfield.

Honeymoon Interests Coach More Than Rally

Fresno, Calif., Feb. 27 (AP).—A honeymooning football coach failed to show up for a welcoming rally at Fresno State College today.

Alumni President Oakley Hunter said the new Fresno State mentor, Duke Jacobs, was expected Saturday and a big student rally and parade were scheduled today.

But Jacobs, assistant coach at Oklahoma University last season, failed to show. He's still reported as on his automobile trip from Norman, Okla.

'Horrible Thing,' Pitcher Says

Red Sox Deny 'Railroading' Jack Kramer to Giants

Boston, Feb. 2 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox denied today charges by Jack Kramer that he was "railroaded out of the American League" because of differences with Manager Joe McCarthy.

The outright sale of the 31-year-old veteran right-hander to the New York Giants of the National League for a reported $25,000 was announced yesterday by Red Sox General Manager Joe Cronin.

Reached by telephone at his New Orleans, La., home, Kramer heatedly declared "the whole thing is horrible."

"The whole deal is a personal thing," he said. "I was railroaded out because I told off Joe McCarthy a couple of times last season."

He added that he "feuded with McCarthy" last year and "there was dissention on our team, too."

Informed of Kramer's charges, Cronin denied the fiery hurler was railroaded out of the league.

"Not only did every club in our league pass him by on waivers but we tried to make a deal with several clubs in our league but they weren't interested," Cronin said.

Frank Sinkwich Seeks Job As Head Coach at Tampa

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP).—Frankie Sinkwich, former All-America star at Georgia, has applied for the head coaching post at the University of Tampa.

Bill Justice, Clearwater high school coach, turned down the post which had been offered him.

Since Coach Mike Gaddis resigned the coaching post, more than 100 applications have been received for his job.

Sinkwich received the Heisman trophy in 1943 for his football play at Georgia. Later he went with the Detroit Lions in the National pro football league, leading the loop in ground gaining. He was voted the most valuable player in the league.

Sinkwich served as backfield coach of the Second Air Force team during the war and in 1946 was a scout for the New York Yankee pro football team. He coached the Erie, Pa., professional team in 1949.

Woodridge Wins

The Woodridge American Legion basketball team defeated Edgewood, 38-21, yesterday in a Langley Recreation League game at Langley.

Golf Invention

New Heads Available to Screwballs

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

I WAS TIRED of dragging an old bag around and I don't mean the married woman I live with. I'm referring to my old golf bag, the toting of which was an accessory before the fact that I gave up the Scotch game along about the start of World War II.

Haight

However, the fact is that a situation developed on the ninth hole at Rock Creek when I was "teaching" my model son, then a Mack Truck model, how to play—and I quote the word "teaching" for a reason.

I had laid into my drive, one of my best in months, and said, "That's the way I mean." Son Ray stepped up, took an Horatio At The Bridge stance, a baseball grip and hit one.

As we were trudging down the fairway, I explained, "You have to hold your head still, weight on the balls of the feet and follow through. If you notice, I put a slight hook on the ball to take advantage of the roll from the hill on the left. Now I wouldn't have gotten all that distance—"

Ray interrupted with, "Pop, I have news for you. This is your ball right here. Mine's down by the green."

My golf career ended on the spot. I gave him my clubs.

But as I started out to write, I was having a hard time wobbling my 250 pounds around the hills and dales without the added weight of clubs and bag. With the war-born caddie shortage, I couldn't see an improved situation in the offing.

Before I gave up I had tried a caddy cart—with the bag on wheels—but I labored like a North Carolina plow mule on the upgrades and the darn thing pulled me downhill as if I were a dory tied to the back of a speedboat.

I don't know if a guy of my proportions was responsible, but somebody has come through with an outfit dubbed "Head On" and it has nothing to do with driving while drunk, if you know what I mean.

"Head On" consists of one shaft, threaded ta the end, and the heads of the various wood and iron clubs. The latter are carried in a belt kit, a sort of carpenter's apron worn backwards like a double kidney plaster.

THE PLAYER reaches back, gets the desired clubhead, screws it into the shaft and takes a shot.

The circular explaining "Head On" says it does away with constant bending over; no interference by the belt kit in swinging saves many steps around and through the putting green; ideal for travel because it is so compact and—last but for from least—the shaft with screwed on protector tip, makes a very fine walking stick.

Now the protector tip—walking stick idea is a honey, leaving the field wide open for the invention of other gadgets to be screwed onto the shaft.

For instance, a fellow could have a rake head to use for leaves and a shovel for snow. The thing would be handy around the house—mop head, brush head, etc.—and there's nothing to prevent the applying of a tip so the shaft could be used for for a pool cue.

I was trying out the mental possibilities of the thing in our living room when my darling daughter stuck her head round the corner of a magazine and remarked, "I'm trying to read. Why don't you stick a nail in the end of it and go out and clean up the park."

Bradley U. Retains No. 1 Spot, Accepts Tourney Invitation

Duquesne, St. John's Take Bids

By Murray Rose

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Bradley University's basketball Braves scored a double victory off the court today.

The popular, doughty lads from Peoria, Ill., accepted an invitation to compete in the National Invitation Basketball tournament in Madison Square Garden and for the second week in a row were picked as the No. 1 team of the country in the Associated Press' poll.

Ohio State was ranked second and Holy Cross' unbeaten Crusaders slipped to third.

Two other outstanding quintets, Duquesne U. of Pittsburgh, and St. John's U. of Brooklyn, also accepted bids to the 12-team N. I. T. tourney which will be held March 11, 13, 14, 16 and 18. Several other quintets are expected to be picked for the Garden tourney shortly.

Bradley also is considered a possibility for the District 5 berth in the NCAA tourney. That holds true for Duquesne (22-1) and St. John's (21-4), who may be in the running for District No. 2.

The NCAA officially has frowned on competition in both tourneys, such as was done by Kentucky last year. The dates do not conflict, however.

Duquesne Fifth

Duquesne (22-1) is fifth in this week's poll, a drop of one peg from the week previous. St. John's, which seems to have lost its mid-season edge, ranked tenth in the poll, a big skid from their previous sixth place ranking.

Bradley (25-3) was accorded a stiff tussle in the poll contest by Ohio State's (18-3) newly crowned Western Conference champions. Bradley accumulated 42 first-place votes and 1214 points on a 10-9-8-7, etc., basis to 10 first-place votes and 1128 votes for Ohio State.

A total of 148 sports writers and sports casters participated in this next to last poll of the season.

N. C. State Eighth

The Big Tenners, picking up plenty of support because of their pennant win in a strong conference, nosed out Holy Cross by 87 points.

La Salle, Kentucky, Western Kentucky, San Francisco, the defending NIT kings, unranked CCNY and LIU are understood to be in the best spot for other NIT bids.

Other NIT prospects include North Carolina State, Kansas State, Canisius, Hamline, Syracuse and Toledo.

The top teams (first-place votes in parentheses and records including Saturday's games, with point on 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis):

	Team	Records	Points
1.	Bradley (42)	25-2	1214
2.	Ohio State (16)	18-3	1128
3.	Holy Cross (36)	24-0	1047

6 Horses Named For Redland Race

Six entries have been received for Saturday's Redland Hunt Point-to-Point feature, Racing Secretary Bill Carl announced last night. The Bowl Race, one of the four events to be held over a course on Martin's Dairy Farm near Olney, Md., thus far has drawn Miss Jane Aitcheson's Merry Lee, Blair Richards' Plurality, Albert Stabler, jr.'s Coshbuckler, Dr. F. A. O'Keefe's Prince Marka, T. T. Mott, jr.'s Chen and Tony Auth's Carvendale Lee.

Long Way From Bay

D. C. Men Hit Mexico for Sailfish

By Ralph Murdock

DISTANCE MEANS little to our local angling fraternity when a fishing trip is involved. They will travel far to enjoy the sport. We have in mind a quartet of enthusiasts who have just returned from a successful trip to Acapulco, Mexico, where sail fishing was the order of the day.

Murdock

Meet the gang: Buck Mead, his brother, Hume; Thomas Kinney and Paul Skelly. This same foursome can be found almost any Thursday fishing on the waters of the upper Chesapeake Bay with their favorite skipper, Johnnie Manifold. Each Thursday is a "must" and is dedicated to a day of fishing on the "Pal-o-Mine." The inseparables seldom fail to nab their share of the fish.

Getting back to the Acapulco trip, Buck Mead remarked, "The spot is a fisherman's paradise, but the fishing boats are far inferior to the crafts which we regularly use in the Bay. Fishing equipment is scarce and often unobtainable. Tackle, hooks, wire leaders and other gear which are so plentiful around Washington just can't be located in this garden spot."

Buck added that the sails were very plentiful. Although the limit was two sailfish per boat they averaged four fish to the trip. The local anglers released all but one fish—it was a 98-pounder which was boated on the last day out. The fish were all caught within sight of land.

The oddity of the trip occurred when the skipper headed for port and inadvertently left a fishing line in the water. A hefty sailfish lost no time in grabbing the bait. As it leaped out of the water it threw the hook from its mouth but got its bill entangled into the wire leader.

While fighting desperately to get loose the sail wrapped the wire even tighter around its bill. The latter predicament led to its capture and the whopper was pulled aboard. The boat was traveling at fair speed when the fish took hold.

HAVE YOU EVER considered what it costs to put fingerlings and catchable size fish into angling streams? Wisconsin has kept accurate figures on these costs and during several years has reduced the costs considerably. However, it is still high.

To produce 1000 muskellunge fingerlings cost the State $81.92. Sixteen-month-old legal-size rainbow trout cost 50 cents a pound to produce. Brown and brook trout hit an even higher figure.

From the local angle the high winds and cold weather broke up a number of contemplated fishing trips to the Severn River and Bloody Point Light.

Lest you forget—the Sportsmen's and Outdoor's Show opens at the Armory on Friday, March 3, and continues through March 12.

Hialeah Double Pays $697.50

Miami, Feb. 27 (AP).—A daily double payoff of $697.50 materialized when Night Life and Retainer won the first two races today at Hialeah.

In addition, there was a consolation prize of $123 to those who combined Night Life with Shock. Shock, owned by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, was withdrawn from the second race at the last minute because of a suspected injury.

Night Life, ridden by Billy Fisk, led all the way but barely lasted to beat Dr. David Hill by a nose in 1:51 for the nine furlongs. He paid $113.80, $31.20, $15.20

Globetrotters Here Tonight

Harlem Globetrotters and New York Celtics, who set a pro basketball attendance record here in their last appearance, meet tonight at Uline Arena in a return match.

In the first game of the double-header, Philadelphia Sphas play New York Renaissance. Between games and at halftime a floor show is planned.

With little fanfare, the Celtics and Globetrotters surprised by drawing more than 6000 here last New Year's Eve.

50 Postmasters Meet Here in Move to Cut Operating Expenses

ECONOMY: The Postoffice Department is trying to reduce its operating costs. Postmasters from 50 big offices were here over the past weekend to talk over economy plans. Meantime, the department's many third-class postoffices have been instructed to reduce their use of temporary and substitute employes.

BRUSH-OFF: Representatives of the AFL's employe unions yesterday had a brief meeting with Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.). They had hoped to discuss Thomas' letter to the two-score independent agencies which told them to: (1) wipe out all accumulated annual leave of their employes by July 1, and (2) to absorb the cost of last year's pay raises. Thomas told the union group he'd be glad to hear any statement they cared to make but he refused to discuss or be cross-examined on his letter. The conference broke up at that point.

RED JAMMING: The Voice of America lost the mass audience it once had in Russia. The Reds are "jamming" the program to prevent Russians from listening to it. Despite the difficulties, Foy D. Kohler, chief of State's International Broadcasting Division, believes we are still reaching an effective hard-core of Soviet listeners.

State is requesting funds for 230 additional employes for its overseas information program. The House Appropriations Committee was told the increases would be as follows: the departmental force here would be boosted from 735 to 744; field offices in this country, mainly New York, from 730 to 778; Americans overseas, 645 to 685, and native employes overseas, 2413 to 2489.

OHE: Employes in this agency are a bit encouraged by promises of support from the liberal bloc in Congress. Rent control would end and the agency would be liquidated by July 1 under a recommendation of the Senate Appropriations Committee. OHE has about 4100 employes.

FHA: It's another housing agency with congressional problems. Federal Housing's authority to insure repair and modernization loans expires tomorrow. In addition, the agency has insured about up to its legal limit of rental housing.

A bill is before both the Senate and the House to continue and expand this authority. FHA didn't request continuation of Section 608 for emergency rental housing, a provision that expires today.

The FHA staff eventually would have to be cut back unless the bill is approved. Its officials are certain it will be as they have approved.

SURE-CHECK: The fingerprints of the 15,000 or more persons who have and will take the Census clerk and tabulating machine operator exam will be made a permanent part of Civil Service's examining files. Persons appointed to the estimated 5500 Census jobs from the test will be fingerprinted again and their fingerprints compared to make certain no "ringers" took the test.

NOTES: Lieut. Austin van Wooten is retiring from the White House police force after 25 years of Federal service . . . Florence V. Greenfield and Bella J. Clifford are retiring today from Treasury's Customs Bureau . . . The Federal Career Employes Association is meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the YMCA, 18th and G st. nw. . .

JOB NEWS: Tests for three types of biology jobs in Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service will be announced soon by Civil Service. The jobs pay $3825 to $6400 to start . . . More than 1100 applicants here passed the recent test for junior professional assistant . . . The board of examiners at Federal Housing here have tests open for construction examiner and valuator, $3825 to $4600 starting salaries . . . A test for naval architect, $4600 to $5400 annually, is open at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard, Portsmouth, Va. . . . An exam for both civil and architectural engineer, $4600 to $6400, is open to fill openings in naval offices here and nearby . . . Tests also are open for animal keeper at the Zoo here, $2450 to $2674, and for animal caretaker, $2120 to $2900 . . .

Radioactive Treatment Aids Study Of the Body

Scientists Getting Valuable Basic Data on Growing And Aging Processes

Sex hormones can now be made radioactive to help doctors study life's little-known growing and aging processes, it was revealed last night.

Dr. Charles L. Dunham, medical chief of the Atomic Energy Commission, divulged the new development in a talk before the annual meeting of Group Health Association, Inc.

He also disclosed that radioactive digitalis and radioactive morphine have been made by growing the plants which produce them in atmospheres of radioactivated carbon dioxide. From these atom age medicines, he said, scientists have new hope for learning just how these useful drugs act within the body.

The importance of "tagging" sex hormones is apparent since these large steroid molecules are known to be involved in such things as cancer, heart disease, and the functions of the adrenal glands, Dr. Dunham pointed out.

Radioactive elements introduced into the body are traced with Geiger counters which detect the rays. By such means, scientists have only recently begun to amass valuable basic data in body-building and destruction processes.

Dr. Dunham termed as "childish" the often-expressed wish that man had never discovered atomic energy.

"It is just as childish as to wish that man had never learned how to use fire," he declared. "The atomic bomb is an awful weapon, but the application of atomic energy differs only in degree from similar applications of fire (he mentioned home burnings and tortures) made by man for the past several thousand years.

A second guest speaker, Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.), outlined his plan for Government insurance against "burdensome" medical expenses.

The proposal was suggested as a compromise for organized medicine's resistance to President Truman's plan for national compulsory health insurance, financed by payroll deductions. The speaker pointed out that where annual medical expenses don't exceed five percent of the family's income, that family can generally take care of the cost.

He proposed that medical costs beyond five percent of the family's income or $150 a year, whichever is smaller, be paid through a national plan.

Senator Douglas said his plan should have a cut-off provision excluding persons with income of more than $6000 a year or "perhaps even $5000."

Harold F. Eisele of the Department of Agriculture; Maurine Mulliner of the Federal Security Agency and Albert Waterston of International Bank, were elected trustees for three-year terms.

Last night's meeting, at the New Interior Building auditorium, was the 12th annual meeting of GHA, the member-owned medical service agency which now provides doctor's care and hospital services to some 18,000 residents of Greater Washington.

Irish Minister Sean Nunan Honored on Eve Of Return to Homeland to Fill New Position

The Washington Post

On hand to wish farewell to Irish Minister Sean Nunan (left) were Navy Secretary Matthews, Labor Secretary Tobin and Chief Justice Vinson

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

The great, the good, and the powerful friends of Irish Minister Sean Nunan—from Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson on down—gave a dinner at the Carlton Hotel last night for the diplomat. It was to say goodby.

And the farewells were as painful for the Minister's friends as they were for him. Nunan, who surrenders the post some time next month, has been Ireland's prime representative to the United States since 1947.

"My heart," he said, "is torn by two emotions—joy in the anticipation of going home to my own country, and sadness at the thought of leaving your great country: the 'greater Ireland beyond the sea'."

There was a considerable part of Ireland-transplanted at the Carlton Hotel when Sean Nunan said that.

To begin with, the whisky was Irish and the matchbooks were green.

In tribute to Ireland's four provinces, the roast beef was named "Leinster," the potatoes, Connaught," the broccoli, "Munster," and the hearts of lettuce, "Ulster."

But the salad dressing was "partitioned."

That was the subject of Nunan's speech—

"Freedom and independence for three-quarters of the nation is not the ideal of the Irish government or the Irish people," he declared.

"Complete freedom for, and the unity of, the whole of Ireland is the aim. But while great progress towards the attainment of that goal has been made, the 'Republic of All Ireland' has not yet been attained, because—as you all know—a part of our small island has been partitioned despite the expressed voice of the Irish people."

Nunan said American opinion has aided Ireland to "abolish the infamous border."

"I hope and I believe," Nunan added, "that in the final drive to that goal, Ireland can count on the sympathy and assistance of all lovers of true democracy in America—and that includes every American worthy of the name."

While the retiring minister did not mention Britain by name, Major Patrick J. Hurley did—and in scolding tones.

"For us who have supported the United Kingdom so generously in war and peace," the former Secretary of War said, "it is difficult to understand why she continues to maintain an unreasonable and fictitious disunity in Ireland."

Like other speakers, Hurley praised Nunan for his ability. Speakers included Justice Vinson, Norman J. O. Makin, Ambassador of Australia; Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews, Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) and Representative John E. Fogarty (D., R. I.). Labor Secretary Maurice J. Tobin was toastmaster, and Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle delivered the invocation.

Nunan first came to the United States in 1919. Since then he has held several Irish government posts, both in the United States and Ireland.

The two countries recently elevated their diplomatic relationship to ambassadorial status. Nunan's successor, John J. Hearn, now Irish High Commissioner to Canada, will thus become Ireland's first Ambassador to the United States when he takes the post here sometime late next month.

Now 60, Nunan's new post will be as assistant secretary of the Irish Department of External Affairs. Both he and his friends said last night they hoped the new job would permit him to return to Washington—"at least occasionally."

Home Fires Rout 50 In District

Family of 6 Left Homeless by Blaze South of Alexandria; Offices Damaged

Fires in three rooming houses forced nearly 50 occupants into subfreezing temperatures in the District yesterday. Another flash fire in a machinery company office chased out eight employes.

And in the Washington area a family of six and a farm hand were made homeless by blazes in their dwellings.

At 2 a. m. fire broke out in the basement of a rooming house at 1116 10th st. nw, firemen said, and forced out 25 occupants, including four children. The blaze ate its way into a first-floor room occupied by John Wash. Cause of the fire and damage were not determined.

Twelve hours later, fire broke out in a third-floor room at 423 New York ave., occupied by Willie Simms. Firemen said it ate up into the attic, then spread to another rooming house at 425 New York ave. Twenty-four tenants were routed from the two places. No damage estimate was available.

At 4 p. m., a flash fire burst through the second floor office of the McBee Co., a business machine concern, which occupies the second and third floors at 1013 and 1015 12th st. nw. Eight employes fled.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kimble and their four young sons were burned out of their three-room bungalow at Engleside, Va., on Route 1, about 5 miles south of Alexandria. Firemen from Mount Vernon and Penn Daw found a blaze from electric wiring had been extinguished by neighbors.

At 12:12 p. m., they were called back and found the entire interior ablaze. They said only walls and roof were left. Damage to the building was estimated at $800 and to contents at $450.

At 11 a. m., yesterday, the Marlboro Fire Department was called to extinguish a woodbox blaze at a tenant house on the Charles A. Duvall farm on Crain Highway, near Croom, Md. The house was a seven-room structure, occupied by Robert Simms, 65, a farm hand.

Two hours later, another call sent the department back to find the house burning to the ground, and a nearby field ablaze, menacing other farm buildings.

Hides in Store

Man Loots Woodward's On Weekend

The Washington Post

JOSEPH ALBERT
. . . Weekend "visitor"

An imaginative burglar who spent the weekend looting the Woodward & Lothrop department store, admitted to police that he burglarized a Chicago store in January by the same method of hiding inside at closing time.

He was identified as Joseph George Albert, jr., 28, of Seattle, Wash.

Police said he pawned 15 watches here which he stole from The Fair department store in Chicago.

When caught, he had a new suitcase, stolen in the Woodward & Lothrop store, loaded with 70 watches and 100 diamond rings. They were valued by store officials at $7500. He also had a hacksaw and was wearing a new outfit of stolen clothes.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, on a housebreaking charge, he waived preliminary hearing and was held for grand jury action under $7500 bond.

Albert told police and reporters that after he burglarized The Fair store, he visited Philadelphia, Providence, R. I., and finally Washington, pawning his loot. He was here from February 11 through February 14, police said. Then he went to Boston, where he pawned more, he said.

He returned to Washington Saturday afternoon and entered Woodward & Lothrop's about 5 o'clock to survey it, he said. He hid in the fifth-floor furniture department. After the store closed, he said, he stayed quiet for "several hours," observing the schedule of three watchmen.

Late Saturday night, he said, he went to the luggage department, obtained a suitcase, then robbed the jewelry department.

Next, Albert said, he helped himself to a complete new outfit of clothing.

"While I was in the men's wear," he said, "a watchman came by and caught me. I stood perfectly still, and I think he took me for one of the wax models. He sat down in a chair and smoked a cigarette and stared at me, not 10 feet away. I stood perfectly still, the longest I ever did in my life. Finally, he got up and walked away."

Ate in Cafeteria

Albert said he visited the store cafeteria from time to time, helping himself to food.

All the time, Albert said, he was alert to avoid the watchmen. He said he watched the watchmen—at least 10 of them—during the 36 hours he was in the store.

After his all-night maneuvering, Albert said he took sheets and blankets for a bed between two partitions in the furniture department and slept Sunday morning.

Then, he said, he began to worry about getting out. First, he said, he went to the basement, and spent two hours sawing at padlocks and other locks, but "couldn't make it."

Rope Broke

Finally, about 3 a. m., yesterday, he picked up a hank of sash cord, and went to a men's room on the third floor. He carefully lowered the suitcase outside a 15-foot iron fence at the entrance to an areaway.

But when he started down the rope himself, it broke and dropped him inside the 15-foot fence. A small bone in one heel was fractured.

Police Pvt. Ernest R. Cox, making rounds, spotted him there, and he readily admitted the crime, Cox said. Other police and firemen with ladders were called to get him over the fence. He was treated at Gallinger Hospital for the fracture, then jailed.

Albert told police he had been an electrical appliance salesman in Seattle, got into debt by gambling, and finally broke up with his wife. He said he has three children, the oldest 5½, and is now on probation on bad check charges.

House Unit Head Fights Home Rule Discharge

McMillan Writes Colleagues Asking Them Not to Sign Petition for Action

House District Committee Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) is writing his House colleagues suggesting that they "refrain" from signing the home-rule discharge petition.

On District Committee stationery, McMillan, whose committee has pigeonholed the Senate-approved measure, said:

"I am certain that if the members of the House really believe in our democratic form of government and the orderly functioning of regular standing House committees, they will refrain from signing a petition to discharge a committee which has voted 15 to 8 against reporting a certain bill after four months of careful hearings."

The McMillan letter brought immediate statements from two other District Committee members—Granger (D., Utah) and Auchincloss (R., N. J.)—that the chairman must be worried that the petition is going to succeed. It now is reported to have 158 of the necessary 218 signatures.

Granger added that "it probably won't convince anyone who was for it anyway. Everyone knows where McMillan stands and that the District Committee set-up was designed to stop home rule."

McMillan's letter noted by name the opposition of the Board of Trade which he said was "composed of approximately 9000 of the leading businessmen in the District," of "the majority of the citizens' associations" here and of "the majority of the American Legion posts."

The District Committee chairman said his committee had held four months of hearings on the Kefauver home-rule bill. A subcommittee held hearings on last June 28, 29, July 7, 14, 15, 20, 22, 26 and 27.

Child Health Facility Need Is Outlined

District taxpayers must build additional child health and educational facilities or support an increasing number of children in local penal institutions, Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, head of the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department, declared last night.

The decision, she told members of the Society of Natives, is in the hand of Washington's citizens. Budget funds can be directed to child care and guidance or they can be used to maintain the reformatories at Lorton and Occoquan.

And, she added, the cost of police and court services as well as the penal institutions is getting higher.

The problem is aggravated, Captain Milliken said, by the fact that there are now more children under five years of age in the District than ever before.

"They will soon be coming into the schools and we are not the least prepared for them," she said.

Mature Americans to Meet

Nomination of officers will be held at 7:30 p. m. Friday at the regular monthly meeting of Mature Americans, Inc., at the Mount Pleasant branch library, 16th and Lamont sts. nw.

Management Seen Studying Negro Hiring

Responsible leaders of management are becoming increasingly concerned with the question of hiring without regard to color, Dwight R. G. Palmer, president of the General Cable Corp., said yesterday.

Palmer told more than 300 students at the opening session of a two-day career conference at Howard University that an "increasing amount of goodwill" also is becoming evident in the question of employing qualified Negro professional men.

Through the day, Howard students discussed employment opportunities with representatives of the fields of engineering, journalism and public relations, retail merchandising, pharmacy and physical science.

Other speakers who appeared before the students during the day and evening were Dr. Robert F. Moore, director of placement of Columbia University; Mrs. Anna Arnold Hedgeman, assistant to the administrator of the Federal Security Administrator, and Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, special consultant to the Commissioner, United States Office of Education.

Sponsored by the university and the National Urban League, the discussions will continue through today.

Citizens Vote To Spend $400 At Playground

The Shipley Terrace Citizens Association last night voted $400 for athletic equipment for the area's new playground.

The playground, located in the southeast community just across the District line, was cleared and leveled by the volunteer labor of association members.

In other business at its meeting at 2603 Southern ave. se., the group asked a traffic survey to determine the need for signals at Naylor rd. and Good Hope rd. se., and for alleviation of the traffic jams at the entrance to Shipley Terrace at 23d st. and Alabama ave. se.

Georgetown

The Georgetown Citizens Association last night asked that all personal property taxes, except the one on automobiles, be abolished.

Meeting at St. John's Parish Hall, Potomac and O sts. nw., the group also voted to oppose the proposed abolition of the weekly transit pass since this action would work a hardship on lower income groups.

North Capitol

The North Capitol Citizens Association held its fortieth anniversary meeting last night at the Atonement Lutheran Church, North Capitol st. and Rhode Island ave.

During the meeting, James A. Crooks and Baxter Smith, former officers of the association, were made honorary lifetime members.

The group went on record in favor of the proposed five-day, 40-hour week for policemen, and the appointment of 300 additional policemen to make the lower workweek possible.

Man, 24, Held for Jury On Charge of Rape

George Thompson, 24, of 1151 1st st. nw., yesterday was held without bond for the grand jury on a charge of raping a 26-year-old woman while riding with her in the rear seat of a sedan.

The woman told Municipal Judge Walter J. Casey that the alleged offense occurred February 24 at 6 a. m. while the car traveled through Rock Creek Park.

Admiral's Widow

Mrs. Endicott Hits Century Mark Today

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Endicott, the widow of Rear Admiral Mordecai T. Endicott, is 100 years old today.

It will be a quiet birthday celebration at 1865 Wyoming ave. nw., where Mrs. Endicott lives with her four daughters. She hasn't been too well lately.

Her husband, who died in 1926, was the first civil engineer officer in the Navy to become the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

Admiral Endicott retired in that capacity in 1908 but was recalled to active duty during the first World War.

Mrs. Endicott was born Elizabeth Adams in Muskingum County, O., where her family had moved early in the 19th century from its Fauquier County, Virginia, home.

The Endicotts have made Washington their home since 1889 when the Admiral was first assigned to a Washington post.

And 1865 Wyoming ave. nw. has been home for the family since 1917. Living there now with Mrs. Endicott are her four daughters, Miss Anna Endicott, Miss Elizabeth Endicott, Miss Louise Endicott, and Mrs. Mary Valentini.

Dunbar to Organize Business Leader Group

A local chapter of "Future Business Leaders of America" will be instituted at Dunbar High School today at 9 a. m. Speakers will include H. N. Fitzhugh, assistant professor of business administration at Howard University; Emmer Lancaster, adviser on Negro affairs for the Department of Commerce, and Mrs. Geneva Balentine of the Equitable Realty Co.

Possible Move Of Capital Given Study

The House Rules Committee yesterday decided on a serene approach to the idea of moving the United States Capital.

In fact, the Rules Committee decided not to decide anything along that line just now.

"We want to think it over," said Chairman Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.).

"Don't sell your house," Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) advised a Washington reporter.

The thought of a new Capital was presented by Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.).

He asked approval of a House resolution to have the Rules Committee make a study and a report to the House on four questions:

1. Whether it is desirable for a supplemental United States Capital to be established in the United States.

2. Whether the United States Capital should be moved to another point in the United States.

3. Whether certain departments or agencies of the Federal Government could be administered as well away from the seat of Government—the Constitution defines the District of Columbia as the seat of Government.

4. Decide what, if anything, should be done about moving the Capital or any Government agencies away from Washington.

Patman's plan says that in considering a new site for the United States Capital special attention should be given to the area west of the Mississippi River, especially Colorado.

After Patman outlined the resolution, Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.) suggested it would be taken abroad as evidence of panic here.

Representative Brown said he thought it would be taken abroad as evidence of a determination here to carry on whatever happens.

Atttempted Bribe To Vote Central Switch Reported

A Board of Education member was offered a $5000 bribe to vote a certain way on the proposed transfer of Negro students from Cardozo High School to Central High School, it was reported yesterday.

This is the story of the alleged bribe offer as told by one informant:

The board member received a telephone call from a person who gave no name and promised $5000 would be forthcoming if the board member voted in favor of the transfer.

The board member reported the incident to the office of United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

Fay said last night he had no comment, nor would any member of the Board of Education comment.

Senate Approves C. F. McLaughlin

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved the nomination of Charles F. McLaughlin as a District Court judge. He now is serving under a recess appointment.

Of the six judicial nominations made last fall by President Truman, only one, Court of Appeals Judge David Bazelon, has so far won Senate confirmation.

Four others are awaiting full committee action—Appeals Court Judges George T. Washington and Charles Fahy and District Court Judges James R. Kirkland and Burnita S. Matthews. All are serving under recess appointments.

No Time to Raise His Fine

Court-Police-Jail Mixup Jails Defendant

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

This is the story of a Washington resident who decided to defend himself against a minor traffic charge in Municipal Court.

Shockey

Convicted, he tried to pay his $10 fine and go home.

But because of a combination of Court-Police - Corrections Department policy and unfortunate circumstances he spent the next 24 hours in District Jail and paid an $8 fine.

Carl C. Shockey, sr., 63, a Navy Research Laboratory employe, of 1922 N st. nw., was charged with failure to give the right of way February 13 at 2d st. and Maryland ave. sw.

His case came up February 23 before Judge Armond C. Scott and Shockey pleaded innocent.

Shockey claims he was denied opportunity to "tell my whole side of the story from the witness stand, as was my right." He said the judge did allow him to ask Pvt. P. J. Musolf of the Accident Investigation Unit, a few questions.

Judge Scott found Shockey guilty, sentencing him to 10 days or $10.

The jurist said yesterday he could not remember the specific case, but commented: "If a witness didn't get a chance to testify it was because the defendant didn't request it. I would not have convicted the man if I hadn't thought him guilty."

Shockey left the courtroom and when he informed a bailiff he was a few dollars short of the necessary ten spot, he was led to the cellblock in the basement.

"There I was given permission to telephone the Navy Department to have my pay check sent," Shockey related." It was then about 12:30 p. m.

"Before I finished telephoning one of the two policemen who drives the van to District Jail said, 'Come with me.' I explained, but it did no good," he said.

Police Pvt. N. G. Thayer, footman on the court-to-jail run, said he vaguely remembers overhearing an "elderly man who said he was connected with the Navy" commenting about a phone call. "We have no authority inside the court building. We have no right to leave a person back at the cell if he has been committed," Thayer said.

Chief Judge George P. Barse had a different interpretation on who has final say when committed persons go from court cellblock to "pokey."

"It is entirely up to the police when a convicted person is taken to jail," the judge said. "And there is no court rule on whether it is a right or privilege to use cell block phones. Phones are located just outside the court lockup, he added, for the convenience of money-shy victims."

At any rate, Shockey arrived at District Jail and went through the works, protesting all the way. Stripped, showered and put into prison uniform, he said.

"Friday morning I was on the kitchen detail with drunks and criminals when a sympathetic trusty finally carried my message to the jail administrative office," Shockey said.

The Research Lab was contacted and a fellow worker paid $8 to the court financial clerk. (Two dollars was deducted from the original $10 fine for two calendar days in the jug.)

Donald C. Clemmer, director of corrections, offered this explanation:

"It is our policy not to allow inmates to make outside phone calls. But we overcome such situations by having a social worker listen to prisoners' stories and carry their messages to proper jail authorities.

"The social worker may have been off duty during Shockey's prison stay. His case is an exception but I certainly won't deny it happened," he said.

Shockey left jail 24 hours after fighting his first traffic charge in 40 years' driving.

Sothoron Measure Backed by Chamber

By a rising vote of 90 to 3, the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce last night voiced approval of the Sothoron bill, as amended, now before the Maryland Legislature.

The measure would revamp the county government extensively and has been dubbed by some of its opponents a a "home rule" bill.

Jerrold V. Powers, counsel to the Board of County Commissioners, who had a major hand in drafting the original measure, denied at the Chamber of Commerce meeting last night that it is a "home rule" bill.

The vote of approval came as a surprise after Powers' speech. Nicholas P. Orem, jr., president of the chamber, said he felt only one side of the case had been presented and asked if anyone wished to speak against it. There was no response. The motion, by G. Kinsey Owens, of Hyattsville, followed and was approved.

The measure as originally introduced would give the county board broad powers to organize or reorganize departments and functions of the county government; control employes, except elective ones, and fix salaries; handle procurement of supplies; handle county-owned real estate; control the police force; fix charges for permits, and govern bugetary and audit systems.

Provisions for establishment of a merit system were stricken out by amendments in the Maryland Senate, and requirements for publication of financial statements and budgets were added.

After discussing detailed provision of the bill, Powers said it would give the county board a broad and flexible control of internal administration to meet any emergencies of government. He said it would supplant a "static" with a "dynamic" form of government that could be adapted to new conditions without action of the Maryland Assembly.

He said objections to the "permissive" features of the bill, if effective, would throw the county government into the same serious difficulties it now faces. He asserted he has heard no objection to any particular items of the bill, but only to the plan in general.

"It is a good bill," he said, "even if it is not perfect. We should do the best we can now with what we have, and when better suggestions are made, try to do that."

T. Hammond Welch, a member of the county board, said that while he would like to indorse the Sothoron bill, he does not believe it goes far enough. He said that with predicted expansion of residential, apartment and commercial developments in the county, a single full-time executive member of the county board will be unable to handle the load of work. He said he believes there should be three full-time members to handle various departments of county government and share the burden.

The meeting last night was at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club at Landover, Md.

'Easy to Lead'

U. S. Called Too Hasty For Japanese

The United States has tried to democratize Japan too quickly, Dr. Joseph Ballantine of the Brookings Institution told the Washington Ministerial Union yesterday.

He spoke to the ministers at a meeting at the Central Union Mission, 613 C st. nw.

Asiatic peoples, he said, have a great desire for recognition of their spiritual, cultural and political equality with the peoples of America and Europe.

Unless we are willing to deal with them on a basis of complete equality, we will never get anywhere, he warned.

"We have got to get it into our heads that other people are as good as we are," Dr. Ballantine declared. "Americans often agree in the abstract to the principle of the equality of mankind, but many do not have deep faith in it," he said.

He urged the ministers to help people to understand that "we must judge others not by our own standards but by theirs," he continued.

But because the Japanese are among the "most difficult people to drive but among the easiest to lead" America should let them make decisions about their future, then help them to carry them out, he said.

Dr. Ballantine, who spent 36 years in Japan urged support for the Japanese International Christian University, to be opened in 1951 or 1952 as one of the best means of Christianizing the Japanese people and leading them to accept a democratic government.

Allied Group Backs County Road Code

The Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring last night strongly indorsed the County Council's proposed road construction code, at the same time urging a strengthened penalty clause.

The road ordinance, on which a public hearing will be held March 11, sets up minimum construction standards for new roads in subdivisions. It also requires the posting of performance bonds by subdividers and penalties for failure to obtain construction permits.

The stated penalty of up to $100 fine or six months' imprisonment for each offense was declared inadequate by Willard Morris, chairman of the group's public highway committee.

He declared the comparatively minor penalty provides the "loophole" for contractors who might wish to evade posting of the performance bond equalling the estimated cost of construction.

Ralph D. Boyd, delegate from the Park Hills Association, agreed with statements attributed to county builders that imposition of he new ordinance would raise the initial cost to home buyers, but added that the improved roads required by the ordinance would require much smaller future costs for reconstruction.

Library Gets Poems From Japanese Unit

The 14-member delegation from the Japanese Diet, now touring the United States, "surprised" the Library of Congress yesterday with two poems written in gratitude to the Library for aid in restoring the Diet's library facilities.

The poems were written by Yukio Ozaki, an outstanding liberal political leader in Japan and a member of the Diet for 60 years. Now 92, Ozaki was at least partly instrumental in bringing the cherry trees to Washington.

And one of his two poems had something to say about the trees:

The cherry trees I sent abroad
With hope of spreading radiance there
Have blossomed, adding to the Spring,
Their beauty and perfume so rare.

The second one, on a philosophical theme, reads:

Doth thou not know that firmament and earth as well
God created for man's immortal soul to dwell?

Presentation came at a luncheon for the Diet delegation and Luther H. Evans, Librarian of Congress; Verner W. Clapp, chief assistant librarian, and other staff members.

Takeshi Yamazaki, delegation chairman, presented the poems in transliterated typescript form yesterday. Today the Library will receive Ozaki's hand-scripted original.

Glen Echo Youth Cleared of Part In Turkey Theft

A Glen Echo (Md.) youth was cleared in Bethesda Police Court yesterday of participating in the pre-Christmas theft of two turkeys from a Potomac poultry farm.

Robert L. Voight, 19, of 201 Wellesley ave., was acquitted by Judge James R. Miller, who deliberated a full week before announcing his decision. Last Monday, Voight testified he was present when two other youths took the turkeys but contended he attempted to dissuade them from the theft.

Also accused with Voight in the turkey thefts were Robert L. Caldwell, 20, and John E. Coffin, 23, both of Carderock, who escaped from the Rockville jail with a third prisoner January 30.

Sir Harry Lauder Funeral Thursday

Strathaven, Scotland, Feb. 27 (U.P.) Funeral services will be held Thursday for Sir Harry Lauder who died peacefully in his sleep last night at the age of 79.

The first memorial service will be at his home for the family and relatives. The second will follow an hour later by invitation to some of his public at Cadzow Church, Hamilton.

Court Asked To Set Aside Girl's Award

A motion was filed yesterday to set aside a $18,500 jury verdict given a 6-year-old girl who fell out of a taxicab driven by her stepfather. The damages were assessed against the taxi owner.

On Friday, the jury returned the verdict before Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut in favor of Ceicley Greene, and her mother, Dorothy Greene of 1213 H st. ne. Defendant in the case was Carmen G. Hathaway, the owner of the taxi driven by Keith Greene when Ceicley fell from it at 14th st. and Kentucky ave. se., in October, 1947.

The girl suffered a fractured skull and permanent nerve injuries when she fell to the street, according to her lawyer, Carl Beruefty. A rear door opened while she was looking for a penny in the rear of the moving taxicab, according to the evidence.

Beruefty contended that responsibility for the condition of the cab rested with the owner rather than with Greene, who rented it by the day. The door latch was apparently defective, the court was told by Beruefty.

New Machine Will Speed D.C. Paychecks

A new employe started a revolution in District payroll procedures yesterday.

It's called an electric accounting machine and its click-clack was music to the ears of District Auditor A. R. Pilkerton.

The new gadget is a proven whiz. It can whip up 2500 paychecks in two hours and it turns them out correctly.

One girl at a typewriter, Pilkerton says, takes five work days to make out the same number and each check must be tediously checked back for possible errors.

As soon as the new machine is well broken in—in about six months—it will take over the whole job of writing paychecks for the District's 18,000 employes.

The job now has three clerks working continously and seven girls working all week during the pay period.

For about one-third of the District's employes who now get wages in cash, the new system will mean a switch to paychecks.

The other two-thirds will find their checks a little stiffer and dotted with square holes which make sure the checks get the correct information imprinted.

All will be a lot more certain of getting paid on time. Meeting the schedule currently under the old system, Pilkerton says, occasionally is a heavy strain necessitating personnel borrowing to get the checks out punctually.

Pilkerton said the machine is the first step in the District's switch to machine accounting methods. He estimated that the complete switchover will take from 18 to 24 months.

Demand Renewed For Arlington Nonpartisan Vote

Six Arlington organizations yesterday reiterated their demands for nonpartisan elections of county officials in a newspaper-type circular distributed to 60,000 homes.

The four-page circular called on Arlington citizens to support their fight for nonpartisan elections and assailed members of the county delegation to the Virginia State Legislature for their alleged refusal to support legislation for a public referendum on the election proposal.

Sponsors of the circular, according to Harley M. Williams, chairman of the Arlington Better Government League, is his own organization; the Arlington Civic Federation, the League of Women voters, the county council of Parent-Teachers Associations, the Citizens Committee for School Improvements and the county branch of the American Association of University Women.

Drury President Speaks

Dr. James F. Findley, president of Drury College, Springfield, Mo., addressed a dinner of the Washington Chapter, Drury Alumni Association, at the YWCA, last night.

B'nai B'rith Award Won by Mrs. Horne

Mrs. Glenora Horne was honored last night by the Montgomery Lodge of B'nai B'rith as the person who has done most to promote interfaith harmony in the Silver Spring area.

A Silver Spring housewife, Mrs. Horne was instrumental in founding and setting the standards for the Silver Spring Cooperative Nursery School. She lives at 9112 Alton pkwy.

Ralph Lutz, lodge president, presented Mrs. Horne with a plaque after a dinner in her honor at Stone House Inn in Silver Spring.

Mrs. Horne was selected for the award by a nonpartisan committee of five, headed by Blair Lee 3d, vice chairman of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Other members of the award committee were the Rev. John F. McClelland, minister of Christ Congregational Church; Joseph L. Brechner, general manager of Station WGAY; Mrs. Mayhew Derryberry, a member of the League of Women Voters, and J. Fendall Coughland of St. Michaels Men's Club.

The Montgomery Lodge of B'nai B'rith will confer the award annually in the Silver Spring area in connection with National Brotherhood Week.

The committee cited for honorable mention: Andrew J. Kessinger, Silver Spring real estate broker; Mrs. Francis E. Pedkins, director of the Spring Gardens Nursery School; Sam Eig, Silver Spring builder and land developer; St. Paul Methodist Church on Grubb rd.; the Inter-Church Bowling League; Judge Alfred D. Noyes of Juvenile Court and Mrs. Marion Hemingway of Takoma Park, president of the League of Women Voters.

Hearing Slated March 7 on Site Of E. Capitol Span

An official dispute over where the next bridge over the Anacostia is to be located will be aired before a House District Subcommittee in a hearing set next Tuesday, March 7, at 10 a. m.

The hearing was ordered by Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) of the subcommittee in charge of traffic and highway problems, at the request of Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), a member of the subcommittee.

Beall said Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer D., Md.) is to be a witness. Also slated to testify are officials of the District Government, who favor the bridge in the line of E. Capitol st., and of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, opponents of the East Capitol st. site.

Beall has introduced a bill which Sasscer favors to clear the way for prompt construction of the bridge at the E. Capitol st. location.

Capuchins Buy Maryland Estate

The Capuchin Order of the Roman Catholic Church has purchased a mansion and 24 acres of land at Winchester, Md., for $82,500, it was disclosed yesterday.

The property, along the Severn River, just north of Annapolis, was bought from Dermot A. Nee of Washington.

A spokesman at Capuchin College, 4121 Harewood rd. ne., said the order will not announce plans for use of the property for two or three weeks.

The order's Province of St. Augustine, which includes this area, has headquarters in Pittsburgh.

Boy, Shot as Prowler, Goes Home, Kills Self

Princeton, W. Va., Feb. 27 (U.P.) A 15-year-old student, wounded while peeping through the window of a residence here, went home and shot himself to death, police reported.

He was identified as R. C. Buchanan, jr., a Princeton high school pupil. Police investigating a prowler report yesterday by W. D. Burford found Buchanan unconscious at his home, a pistol by his side. He later died in a hospital. Buchanan had been shot in the hip by Burford, but death was attributed to a self-inicted wound in the temple.

C. G. Koonce Dies; Retired GPO Printer

Funeral services for Charles G. Koonce, 81, retired Government Printing Office printer, who died Sunday, will take place at 11:30 a. m. Wednesday at the Hines funeral chapel, 2901 14th st. nw.

A native of Raleigh, N. C., Mr. Koonce began his career as a printer on the News and Observer in that city under the late Josephus Daniels. The men formed a friendship which lasted until Mr. Daniels' death.

Mr. Koonce came to Washington in 1903 and joined the GPO staff, from which he retired in 1933. He has lived in the District area since 1903. He died at his home, 1216 N. Troy st., Arlingfon.

Mr. Koonce was in his sixty-first year of membership in the International Typographical Union. He was a member of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church since he came to Washington. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of that church, will conduct the funeral services. Burial will be at Glenwood Cemetery.

Surviving Mr. Koonce are his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy K. Nazworth and a stepdaughter, Mrs. Mildred Ernst, both of Washington; a son, George Richard Koonce of Fairfax County, Va., and a sister, Mrs. L. G. Patterson of Smithfield, N. C.

Msgr. Carroll Funeral Mass Held Here

Funeral mass for the Right Rev. Msgr. Walter S. Carroll, 41, who died last Friday at Georgetown Hospital, was held yesterday at St. Matthew's Cathedral here.

Msgr. Carroll, a native of Pittsburgh, was visiting in this country from his post in the Vatican Secretariat of State at Rome when he was stricken.

The funeral sermon was preached by Bishop John J. Wright, Bishop-designate of Worcester, Mass., a classmate of Msgr. Carroll's at the North American College in Rome.

The mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate, assisted by the Right Rev. Msgr. Howard Carroll, brother of Msgr. Carroll, and Father Coleman Carroll of Pittsburgh, Pa., another brother.

Another funeral ceremony will be held at St. Paul's Cathedral, Pittsburgh, on Wednesday, with burial in that city.

The following served as active pallbearers: Eugene J. Butler, Herve L'Heureux, Thomas D. Hinton, James S. Mitchell, Bruce M. Mohler, Burke Walsh.

Building Bond Vote Approved In Takoma

The Takoma Park city council last night approved motion authorizing a special election to determine if the city should issue up to $200,000 in bonds for the construction of a new municipal building.

If the action is favorable, the money from the sale of the bonds would be put into a general improvement fund for construction of the building which would house a civic center and a memorial to the city's war dead.

The motion for the election was made by Councilman Lawrence Oosterman, who declared that to further delay action on the measure would mean the council was afraid to face the issue.

He referred to some public opinion expressed through the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce favoring a program of off-street parking facilities and street-widening rather than construction of the municipal building.

A motion to delay the matter until the new council is elected in March was defeated by a vote of 4 to 3. The council met at its regular chambers at 8 Columbia ave.

1000 Surgeons Expected Here For Conclave

About 1000 surgeons are expected here next week for the first Washington assembly of the Southeastern Surgical Congress.

The annual meeting for presentation of scientific papers and formal convocation of members will be held at the Shoreham Hotel, from Monday through Thursday.

The Congress, comprising some 1500 members, is composed of surgeons from 12 Southeastern States and the District of Columbia. Its geographical hub is Georgia, with Maryland and District of Columbia units added only last May to form its new Northern rim.

Dr. Harry Lee Claud of Washington, is serving as general chairman of the assembly committee. His co-chairman are Drs. Charles Stanley White and Harry Hyland Kerr, also of this city.

Convocation services are scheduled for Wednesday night, March 8, at which ten Washington surgeons are to be admitted as senior fellows; four as junior fellows; three as honorary fellows, and five others as associate fellows.

William Hardy Dies; Newspaper Group Head

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 27 (U.P.)—William N. Hardy, 60, general manager of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Association, died today of a heart ailment.

Hardy was credited with fathering the annual celebration of "Newspaper Week" each October 1-8.

When Hardy quit as make-up editor of the New York Herald Tribune in 1929 to become director of PNPA, the organization represented less than half the State's press. Today PNPA's membership includes 302 daily, weekly and Sunday newspapers.

Girl, 39, Candid About Humble Life, Wonders If She Should Wed Self-Made Professional Man Six Years Younger, Whose Schooling Is Superior

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 39 years of age, come from very humble beginnings, and did not have the opportunity to acquire a high school education. But I get on well with people and they like me because of my personality.

For four years I have been going steady with a young man who is six years younger than I am. He also comes from very humble beginnings, but through hard work he managed to put himself through college and is now a professional man.

I like to do the little things that please him and I have learned very much from him. He gets enjoyment out of taking me around with him and showing me things I've never seen before. He says it makes him happy to make me happy.

It was not love at first sight, but after four years of companionship, we find ourselves deeply in love and Eben has asked me to marry him. The differences in educational background and age make me hesitate. Eben insists that the age difference doesn't matter and that I can always learn from him, but I fear that he may leave me for a younger person when I have lost my youthful vigor and become too old to meet his physical needs in later years. Please tell me if I should risk marriage with these thoughts in mind. G. V.

Future Is Merely Extension of Now

DEAR G. V.: When one is young in terms of tireless vigor and unfledged emotional experience, say prior to 40 years of age, it may seem that one's earthly future stretches ahead in an endless vista in which "anything can happen." But after 45, anyone whose awareness includes some sense of dawning perspective on the limited human life span, surely perceives that the only happiness you can count on in human relations is that which you have now, in the present, day by day.

And if you have woven an honest rapport with Eben, strengthened and tested in four years' companionship, it is logical to assume that your devotional relationship with him will retain its present character and last indefinitely—because the future, when it comes, is merely a succession of todays. And there tends to be a characteristic sameness about the fruits of one's days, especially marked after middle age.

In my opinion, your devotion to Eben is the stabilizing factor in the relationship, the factor that caused friendship to mature into mutual love. From a man's viewpoint, your emotional disposition toward him is ideal. You profess great personal humility as compared to him, also great pride in his accomplishments and respect for his views, yet you express these touching sentiments not in terms of ignoble self-deprecation but in "looking up" to him, singing his praises and setting a pace of trying to please. All of which makes him feel wonderful in your company and puts a halo around your head in his thoughts—so that he wants to have and to hold this treasure for life.

Time Has Come to Live Bravely

SINCE YOU didn't win him by glamour girl enticements, you don't need to fear that kind of piracy in the dim distant future, because a man runs to type in the emotional consolation he seeks from a woman—and it seems that Eben has special need of being built up in his own estimation, by a comfortable sweetheart (and wife) who reminds him of his mother. Thus in later years, when your youthful vigor has waned, if your appreciation of Eben's virtues, wisdom and personality remains as vividly enthusiastic as today, you can bet he won't leave you.

At your age, the time has come to live bravely, not hobbled by borrowed fears,—else the future may find you still waiting to get started, still existing in suspense, rather than tasting deeply of at least some happiness. It were poor economics of happiness, I think, to by-pass a marriage offer from a praiseworthy man you love, simply because you can't see the outcome from here. For advice, consider Eben's need of you, and marry for the joy of helping him now. Let the future take care of itself. M. H.

Table Decorations to Compete for Prizes At Democratic Club Fashion Show

Plans are going forward for the annual spring luncheon and fashion show of the Woman's Democratic Club to be held Wednesday, April 12, in the Presidential and Congressional Rooms of the Statler Hotel.

Major added attraction at the affair will be the table decoration contest, with the 48 States and three Territories competing for prizes. This feature, inaugurated at last year's luncheon, is being repeated because of popular demand, and several States have entered two or more tables in the competition.

Mrs. James A. Murray is chairman of the event. The fashion show, featuring the 1950 American spring collection of Christian Dior, is under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Fairall, vice president of Julius Garfinckel & Co.

An elaborate souvenir program is being prepared and will include greetings from business concerns in all the 48 States. Mrs. Lawrence Sherfy, jr., is chairman of this committee.

Mrs. Charles F. Brannan is chairman of the subcommittee in charge of patronnesses; Mrs. Clarke Howell Woodward holds the same position on the invitations committee.

A staff of workers will be at the clubhouse office throughout March to answer questions and take reservations for the luncheon.

Your Figure, Madame

Mirror, Mirror on the Wall— Be Honest or Don't Tell at All!

By Ida Jean Kain

THE mirror technique will help you to see yourself not only as you are but as you can be. You know now you can make yourself over. This is an exciting before-and-after experiment with you as the model.

Vanity is not the object of this mirror study. Analyze the gal in the mirror quite objectively. It's necessary to face honestly what needs fixing—otherwise you may minimize in your mind the importance of the project. The tape measure gives a completely unbiased view, so get a line on your figure.

Circle the tape around the waistline first—that's where figures settle. Don't pull tape too tight . . . better let it out an inch. Write this measurement down.

Then measure across the abdomen, circling tape around top of upper hips in back and bringing it around across crest of hipbones and together in front.

Now the hips. To get the full hip measure, circle tape around lower hips at the largest part, including derriere. Don't indent!

Measure Over an Uplift Bra

IN measuring the bust, measure over an unlift bra if there is any tendency to sagging. Circle tape around back, bring it together across center of bust, not tightly.

Mark down all measurements. If you would not be happy with the same proportions on a smaller scale, aim at your perfect proportions. It's symmetry that makes a good figure, whether you are normally a size 12 or an 18.

With weight at healthy normal, the bust measurement is likely to be right for your build. A waistline that measures 8 to 9 inches less than the normal bust circumference is shapely; a flat frontline below the waist is streamlined; and hips that measure not more than 12 inches larger than the slim waistline are proportionately right. These proportionate differences, with your weight at normal, will give you a perfect figure.

Now step back and take a long view. As you stand there, give your figure a lift by pulling firmly up-and-in with the middle muscles and contracting strongly with the hip muscles—that gets your figure on the beam. Holding this grip, lift your head proudly. That's just the beginning of what you're going to do for your figure.

Use Imagination on Those Bulges

NOW stretch your imagination again. Half close your eyes and picture your own figure well-proportioned. Use imagination to see through the bulges to the way your figure can look . . . and that is the image to hold in mind. Visualizing the goal will spur you on.

The importance of believing you can have this lovely figure at normal weight cannot be overemphasized, for it is this faith that changes wishing into "willing." One of our greatest thinkers and psychologists, William James, declared that our belief at the beginning of an undertaking is the one thing that assures the successful outcome of our venture. This applies to everything—certainly to figure-fixing.

Chart your course. Mark in red crayon on the tape your present measurements . . . also write them down in a small pocketbook. Keep a weekly record of improvements.

Club Women Say

'A Policeman's Lot Is Not Happy One' (in D. C.)

THE D. C. FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS yesterday indorsed a five-day, 40-hour workweek for Washington's policeman, who are now on the job six days and 48 hours weekly.

The clubwomen indorsed proposed legislation which would shorten the work week for policemen and at the same time provide additional appropritaions to maintain adequate police service.

The federation's stamp of approval for the work week came in response to a resolution from Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, a member of the legislative department of the federation.

The proposal which has been drawn up by the D. C. Police Department and the D. C. Federation of Citizens Associations will be presented to the House Appropriations Committee as a possible rider to the District's appropriation bill.

"Washington's policemen have to work much harder than those in other cities," said Mrs. Howard in her request for club support of the proposal. "We have all these teas and cocktail parties and Embassy functions which require special police staffs, to say nothing of the extra policemen needed to follow the President around," she continued.

Mrs. Howard also stated that authorities have to go as far as Pennsylvania and New York for recruits for the D. C. Police Department.

A cut in the work week would induce men of higher caliber to join the force and would lessen the amount of disability and sick leave among the men, she asserted.

At the business meeting at the Hamilton Hotel, federation members also voted unanimous support of the Langer bill (S600).

The bill would amend the Veterans' Preference Act of 1944 to give Government "career" employes of 15 years' standing "superpreference," protecting them from being ousted by veterans of lesser length of service.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, legislative chairman for the D. C. federation, asked club members to use "whatever influence you may have" with members of the House of Representatives to kill the Hayden amendment to the equal rights amendment as passed by the Senate January 25.

The amendment in question, sponsored by Senator Carl Hayden of Arizona, reads: "The provisions of this article shall not be construed to impair any rights, benefits or exemptions conferred by law upon persons of the female sex."

This amendment, according to Mrs. Wiley, "nullifies the intent" of the equal rights amendment, which would grant women complete equality with men in the Nation's laws.

During the afternoon session Federation members were advised to continue their support of National Representation for the District by Jesse Suter, columnist for The Evening Star.

Make It Concrete

'Time Women Did Something About Peace'

Representative Reva Beck Bosone appealed to the women of America yesterday to give a peace monument to the women of Russia.

Rep. Bosone

What about the Iron Curtain?

It doesn't matter about the Iron Curtain, said the former Utah judge, "We could crack or rip the Iron Curtain."

In her address before the Women's National Democratic Club yesterday at its headquarters, Representative Bosone, declared "It's just about time you women cut loose and did something about peace."

"Wealthy women of America would do well to give their money to bring about peace," she continued.

She also suggested that women's clubs provide opportunity for hundreds, instead of dozens, of foreign students to enter this country's colleges.

Talk on Near East

Edwin M. Wright, State Department authority on Near East, African and South Asian affairs, will address the international relations section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase today, 2 p. m., at the clubhouse. Mr. Wright will discuss "The Near East—a Barometer of International Pressures."

McMahon Urges U. S. Action On Peace at ORT Meeting

SENATOR Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) yesterday reiterated his belief in two projects which would make the rest of the world realize "our deep-seated desire for peace."

Speaking before the twelfth annual membership luncheon of the Women's American ORT, Washington Region, at the Shoreham Hotel, Senator McMahon again urged that the United States give two-thirds of its annual 15-billion-dollar armament budget to the United Nations in the next five years to "put flesh on the bones" of the international organization. He also urged the Senate to ratify the Genocide Convention which the U. N. has prepared.

The Convention would make it an international crime for anyone to kill, inflict intolerable conditions of life or kidnap the children of any group—national, racial or ethnical. American participation in the Convention now requires a two-thirds vote of the Senate.

Also speaking at the meeting of the group, which provides funds for rehabilitation through occupational training, were Ira Hirschman, international authority on displaced persons and former special attache at the United States Embassy in Ankara; Mrs. Ludwig Kaphan, national president of ORT, and Mrs. Abe M. Cohen, president of the Washington region of ORT.

Having acted as special envoy to rescue victims of fascism during the war, Mr. Hirschman was involved in the transporting of children across the Bosphorus from Europe to Palestine. "The doors of the world were slammed in the faces of these children," he said. "Strangely enough nobody wanted them. Only one spot welcomed them graciously, fully," he said. "That was Israel."

"Other people call them D.P.'s," Mr. Hirschman said, in reference to the still homeless people who survived the Nazi's concentration camps, "but I call them B.P.'s—Betrayed People."

Mrs. Cohen urged members of ORT to remember the "survivors, the remnants, the refugees" and to provide training for "these hands so they'll never ring your doorbell for a handout." Mrs. Cohen pointed out that the 68-year-old organization now has training programs in 20 countries including Israel where there are 22 ORT schools.

Dominican Freedom Celebrated

By Marie McNair

THE Dominicans battled the French, the Spanish and the Haitians to gain their freedom. Yesterday, celebrating 106 years of their country's independence, the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen entertained at a large reception at the embassy, with all the Chiefs of Mission, members of official circles as well as many of their personal friends as guests.

Red, White and Blue

All the rooms in the drawing room suite had been turned over for the entertainment of the 300 or more guests. In the paneled library there was a bar; in the dining room another bar and the long buffet table decorated with red roses and birthday cakes iced with the red, white and blue Dominican flag, was set up in the ballroom.

Naturally all the Latin American envoys who were in town and not victims of the current cold, were on hand. I was surprised to see the Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Panyushkin, come in, more surprised that he stayed almost an hour.

The Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco and his sister, Miss Carolina Nabuco, were there and the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Winiewicz, the Finnish Minister, K. T. Jutila, Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador with her niece Sophie Meyer, as the Ambassador flew on Saturday for a 10-day stay in Paris.

The Ecuador Ambassador, Augusto Dillon, was alone, Senora de Dillon being not yet up to par; and I saw the British Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks but not Lady Franks.

Supper Table

After champagne and cocktail tidbits, guests crowded around the supper table, filling their plates with mounds of arroz con pollo, green salad, thin slices of turkey or ham.

In this room I saw Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle exchanging pleasantries with Mme. Rybar, whom he knew in Poland; Prince and Princess Pignatelli and Mrs. Morris Cafritz. The Italian Ambassador, Alberto Tarchiani, was there with his twins —Litizia and Dora; Presidential Secretary and Mrs. Charles Ross were making the rounds and the Yugoslav Ambassador, Sava Kosanovic, was accompanied by his sister, Mme. Mica Trbojevic.

Here and there were: Mrs. Wade Haislip, Gen. Harry Vaughan, the Dominican Minister to U. N., Enrique Narchenna, and Senorita Minerva Bernardino, with Senora de Narchenna; Mrs. Roy Woodruff, Gen. Robert Walsh, Mrs. Paul Daniels, wife of our Ambassador to the OAS, who doesn't hesitate to say she loves Latin American cooking; Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Bartelt, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, former Ecuador Ambassador, introducing the new Panama Ambassador, Rodolfo Herbruger, to official Washington, without his senora, who has succumbed to the prevalent virus.

In the Throng

Met tiny Mme. Ensenbel and her husband, First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, on their way in. Saw Mrs. Conger Pratt and Mrs. James Vardaman standing together in the entrance, and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin at the door.

In another group were Mrs. Benjamin H. Lingo, Mrs. Elden P. King and Mrs. W. D. Whittemore. Then there were Mrs. Walter Wilds, Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. McEnerney, Alfred Lilienthal, Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg, Mrs. J. J. Mack with red poppies on her hat; former Ambassador and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Comdr. and Mrs. Robert E. Fowler and with them Miss Pamela Hale; Col. and Mrs. Randolph Truett, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mme. Grace Espaillat, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Freer, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Middleton Hill, Col. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. Frederick M. Gould, Sidney Graves, William Manger of the Pan American Union; the Robert Dudleys, M. and Mme. Chautemps.

And as I left, the door of a big black limousine opened and out jumped the little Iran Ambassador, Russein Ala, whose appointment as Foreign Minister of his country was made known yesterday.

Departing Canadians Honored at Party

GROUP Capt. L. J. Birchall, Assistant Air Attache of the Canadian Embassy, and Mrs. Birchall, gave an informal cocktail party yesterday as a farewell to Group Capt. and Mrs. G. M. Fawcett who are returning to Canada tomorrow. Captain Fawcett has been serving as a member of the Canadian Joint Staffs.

The Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong were among the guests and others included Air Vice Marshal and Mrs. Hugh Campbell, members of the Canadian Joint Staffs, a number of air attaches of other embassies as well as civilian and service friends of the guests of honor.

The Seventy-eighth Congress women's club will meet Wednesday for luncheon at the Olde Club House in Alexandria. Miss Eleni Sakes will talk on "Highlights of Spring Fashion." Mrs. Harold Hagen is president of the club and Mrs. Clair Engle is chairman of the meeting.

Seen lunching at the Statler yesterday were Mme. Kleinwaechter, wife of the Austrian Minister, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, and Mrs. Tom Connally. At another table were Mrs. Anthony Drexel Biddle and Mrs. Clark McIlwaine. Another luncheon party included Mrs. Juliet Ansberry, Mrs. W. Royce Powell, and Senora de Echegaray.

A cocktail party will be given today by the Charge d'Affaires of Egypt, Dr. M. B. Chiati, at his apartment, in honor of Dr. Abou Zeid of Cairo. The Ambassador of Egypt and Mme. Abdul Rahim, who are visiting in Egypt, are expected back in town the end of March.

COWBOY boots from Wyoming were among the first donations to arrive for the Congressional Club's All States Fair, which will be held at the clubhouse, 2001 New Hampshire ave. Friday and Saturday. Mrs. Frank A. Barrett, wife of the Representative from Wyoming, shows them to Mrs. William Lemke, wife of the North Dakota Congressman, as they discuss plans for their booths in the Fair. Each State, including the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska, will have its own booth offering articles from the home districts. The Fair will be open from 10 a. m. to 7 p. m. Friday, and 11 a. m. to 6 p. m. Saturday

Cardiac Camp Trips Assured

FIFTY Washington children suffering from heart ailments have been assured two-week outings this summer at cardiac camps sponsored by the Washington Heart Association as a result of a recent benefit dance held by the Women's Association of Allied Beverage Industries.

Mrs. Julia T. Kraisel, president of the WAABI, presented a check for $2504 to Dr. Bernard J. Walsh, chairman of the Heart Association's cardiac camp program.

Camping vacations for each child costs $45 to $50, Dr. Walsh said, and the WAABI check will make possible vacations for 50 children.

Last August, two cardiac camps, Camp Sunshine for white children and Camp Wonderland for Negro children located near Dunfors, Va., were established by the association in cooperation with the summer outing committee of the Family Service Association.

Before going to the camps, children were given thorough physical examinations by qualified heart specialists. Each child went to camp with an exact diagnosis of his condition as well as a list of suggested activities in which he might participate.

In planning activities for the camps, emphasis was not placed on physical activities as in most camps, but included woodcraft, dramatics, nature study and such other activities arranged by the occupational therapist as were suited to the limitations of the individual children.

ANNE

Some Movies Have the Right Idea, They Provide the Baby Sitters! As Vinegar a Deodorant in Kerosene

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me if there are any theaters in the Washington area that have nurseries that care for your small children while you are attending the movie?
T. G. K.

Another reader, J. G., is interested in the same subject and has sent us a list of these theaters for the benefit of other mothers. They are located at: 4813 Massachusetts ave. nw.; 1331 H st. ne.; 4859 MacArthur blvd. nw.; 2834 Alabama ave. se., and the corner of Piney Branch and Flower rds., Silver Spring.

DEAR ANNE:
There is a squeaky board in the floor of our apartment. It proves annoying, especially since it's right at the front door and everybody who comes in steps on it. Our management is in no mood to do anything about the floors in the house. However, I thought you might have some simple remedy for stopping the squeak.
Washington 8, D. C. MRS. L. P.

When such squeaks are caused by one board in the floor rubbing against the next, they can sometimes be silenced with talcum powder. Sift it liberally into the cracks. It's worth a try, anyway.

DEAR ANNE:
Is there any way to change a refrigerator door from a left to a right-hand opening? Or is there any place that would exchange the refrigerator?
Riverdale, Md. R. N. S.

The door can be changed on some refrigerators, not on others. You could consult one of the firms listed under "Refrigerator Dealers and Service" about the model and make you have. On some of the older ones, the door can be turned upside down and rehung. For some new ones, you can order a new right-hand opening door, I am advised.

As to exchanging the refrigerator, dealers make trade-in allowances on old boxes. The additional amount you would have to pay depends on the value of your present refrigerator. Or, if you haven't the money now to indulge in a new one, perhaps you could locate a dealer with a second-hand, right-hand refrigerator with a right-hand opening and make some sort of swap.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me if you can successfully paint galvanized iron?
Hyattsville, Md. T. K. WILSON.

Galvanizing does not make a very good surface for painting, especially when new, because of the nature of the surface and the film of zinc compound which prevents paint from forming a good bond.

However, if the iron you wish to paint has been exposed to the weather for six months, it will be in condition for painting. As a conditioner on newer iron, you can sometimes use vinegar staisfactorily. Where galvanizing is thin, this or some other acid may destroy it.

DEAR ANNE:
In a small bathroom where we used to have a kerosene oil stove, the tank leaked, spilling oil on the floor. We now have an electric heater, but the memory of the other stove lingers on in the form of the coal oil odor. Can you tell me how to get rid of it?
Fredericksburg, Va. W. R. W.

Plain vinegar is an excellent deodorant for kerosene. Sponging the floor liberally with it should get rid of the aroma.

DEAR ANNE:
Near our house are several locust trees. I have heard they attract lightning. Since we are planning to cut some trees, I would like to know about this.
V. R.

No, this is a fallacy. Lightning strikes a tree not because of its kind but because it provides an easy path to the ground. One tree is as good as another in this regard.

Grandmother Advises

How to Stay Young

"It's every woman's duty to stay young-looking" declares this smart, young grandmother. "And the way to do it is to take care of yourself. Conserve energy . . . use today's modern labor-saving methods. Take laundry . . . it's absurd for any woman to do laundry at home in this enlightened age. That's why I use MANHATTAN and have for years. They're so efficient and inexpensive." MANHATTAN has a laundry service to fit any budget! Phi Mu Women's Fraternity Schedules Anniversary Fete

The ninety-eighth anniversary of the founding of Phi Mu Fraternity will be celebrated with a formal banquet at the Wardman Park Hotel on Saturday at 7 p. m. Immediately preceding the banquet, the Founders' Day ceremony, open only to members in recognized national standing, will be observed.

The anniversary also marks the thirty-fifth birthday of the Beta Alpha Chapter at George Washington University. Three charter members of that group who live in the Washington area—Mrs. Helding Beij, Miss Elizabeth Cullen and Mrs. Hunter Mulford—will be guests of honor.

Miss Jean Proetsch, toastmistress, will introduce the guest speaker, Fred Carl, chairman, Province 19, Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity, who will speak on the subject "Fraternity Cooperation." Miss Elizabeth Ferber, president of the Gamma Delta Chapter at American University, and Miss Barbara Quigg, president of the Beta Alpha Chapter at George Washington University, will participate in the program. Miss June Kullberg, retiring Washington Alumnae Association president, will make the annual alumnae scholarship awards.

D. C. Gas Net Mounts 13% In January

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. and subsidiary companies yesterday reported net income of $468,811 for January, a 13 percent increase over the $412,938 in the same 1949 month.

A rate increase, effective last November 16, contributed largely to the improvement. Consolidated operating revenues aggregated $2,445,501 during the month, up $181,240. Operating expenses of $1,898,682 were up $127,092.

Despite warmer temperatures in January, gas sales for the system totaled 20,133,908 therms for a gain of 4 percent over January, 1949. Meters in service in the District of Columbia totaled 174,977 at the end of January, an upturn of 1845 in the past 12 months.

AUTO SALES: Washington sales of new cars and trucks in January dipped to the lowest total for that month in three years. Last month's sales totaled 2134, against 2268 in January 1949 and 2338 in the same 1948 month, according to the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

VARIETY: Despite long arguments of minority groups, stockholders of U. S. Steel Corp. overwhelmingly approved employes pensions and insurance . . . Bethlehem Steel Corp. increased its ingot capacity by 800,000 net tons last year, the annual report showed . . . Steel operations this week are scheduled at 73.7 percent of capacity, a slump of 15.1 points from the previous week as the coal strike cut deeper . . . Stockholders of Suburban National Bank bought 8413 of the additional 10,000 shares. Remainder was oversubscribed . . . More than 135 representatives of the Delaware-Maryland-D. C. Division of Esso Standard Oil Co. attended a sales and cost conference yesterday in the Shoreham Hotel.

PENSION FUND: The 869 employes of local Sears, Roebuck & Co. stores now have an aggregate investment of $1,544,254 in the company's savings and profit sharing pension fund. This was shown in individual statements handed to employes by H. K. Duffield, Washington area general manager. The local group has to its credit in the fund 27,504 shares of Sears' stock (yearend market value was $44 1/8 a share) plus a cash balance of $330,624. The fund, established in 1916, showed total current assets of $267,328,000 at yearend. In order to amass this, the fund's 102,458 members have deposited $46,700,000 out of their pay.

ODD LOTS: Local office of Pan-American Life Insurance Co. has been moved into the Kass Building, 711 14th st. nw., General Agent Harry Lebowitz announced. . . . Southern Oxygen Co., Inc., declared regular dividend of 50 cents a share, payable March 31 to stock of record March 21. . . . Largest advertising campaign in Capital Airline's 23-year history will be launched in 125 Eastern newspapers next month. . . . Sixty-two percent of the passenger autos in operation at the end of 1949 were pre-war models, according to R. L. Polk & Co. . . . Assets of Atlantic Life Insurance Co. increased more than 3½ million dollars in 1949 and amounted to $57,027,479, reported Washington General Agent W. N. McCord.

PENNSY'S NET: Pennsylvania Railroad reported net income of $1,168,760 in January, a decrease of $345,916 from the same 1949 month. Aggregate revenues of $66,760,866 were down $15,025,873 while operating expenses of $55,192,826 were off $13,884,252.

TAKE OFFICE: Seven new members of the board of governors of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., took office yesterday at the annual meeting here yesterday. They are: Clarence A. Bickel, Milwaukee; Ewing T. Boles, Columbus, Ohio; Charles P. Cooley, Hartford; W. Fenton Johnson, New York City; Harper Joy, Spokane; Ira D. Owen, Minneapolis, and Albert W. Tweedy, Boston. New officers, as announced previously, are: John Sullivan, chairman; Francis Kernan, vice chairman; Eaton Taylor, vice chairman; S. Davidson Herron, treasurer, and Wallace H. Fulton, executive director.

DEFICIT: Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reported a deficit of $838,443 for January, against net income of $1,116,702 in the same 1949 month. Operating revenues of $27,260,377 were down $4,225,241.

EARNINGS: Union Carbide & Carbon Corp. reported net income of $92,210,192 or $3.20 a share for 1949, compared with $102,335,053 or $3.55 a share in 1948. Other earnings statements:

J. GORDON TURNBULL INC., ARCHITECT-ENGINEER

Johnson builds not only industrial plants, but entire cities, including homes, apartments, schools, hospitals, and utility plants. We are no strangers to high eight-figure building contracts, yet we will handle moderate-sized industrial plants or extensions.

"Completion on Time" is a Johnson requisite. To this end we eliminate material bottlenecks by maintaining our own heavy equipment and trucking organization, a pre-engineering subsidiary, our own lumber and material yards and a personnel that works well under pressure.

Industry is turning more and more to Johnson. Let us show you why.

Furniture Trade Prospects Look Good to FHA Official

The Washington Post

Rep. "Mike" Monroney (left) with Maury L. Nee

Rosy prospects for the furniture business were predicted last night as several hundred members of the National Retail Furniture Association gathered at the Statler Hotel to honor their new president, Maury L. Nee.

Nee, youthful executive of the P. J. Nee Co. of Washington, attributed the industry's bright outlook to its readiness in meeting the needs of American homemakers.

The speaker of the evening, Franklin D. Richards, commissioner of the Federal Housing Administration, also was optimistic.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the high volume production of housing, population growth and rising standards of living add up to continuing high-level sales in home furnishings," he said.

Future demands for housing, Richards said, will be strong among lower and moderate income groups, among minority groups and in cooperative ventures.

Representative A. S. Monroney (D., Okla.) and Calvin Johnson, former Republican Congressman from Illinois, served as bipartisan toastmasters.

Other guests joining in tribute to Nee were Raymond Foley, administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and Frederick P. H. Siddons, president of the Washington Board of Trade.

Federal Tax Credit Beaten In Maryland

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 27.—The Maryland House of Delegates tonight heeded the warning of Majority Leader Leroy Pumphrey and killed a bill which would have ruled out State income tax payments on Federal income tax payments.

The bill failed to reach its required three-fifths majority when the 61 House members voted "aye" and 52 "nay." The Senate had taken similar action last Friday night.

The measure was killed shortly after the House had passed Governor Lane's record 144.2-million-dollar budget. Pumphrey warned delegates "you will tear the life out of the things you have voted if you pass the bill."

Earlier the House, by a 78-37 vote, approved a proposal to hold annual 60-day sessions instead of the 30 and 90-day sessions now authorized for even and odd years.

Delegate Leroy Preston (D., Baltimore), and a sponsor of the measure, succeeded in making it a special order of business when the Assembly convened in night session heer. He declared, "I feel the time has come when we need an annual general session of the legislature. It will eliminate a great deal of confusion, and rid us of much of the doubt concerning constitutionality of bills now before us."

$144 Million Lane Budget Is Passed in Maryland

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 27. (AP)—The Maryland General Assembly today passed Governor Lane's record $144,203,564 appropriations bill.

The appropriations measure included a budget totaling $143,557,308 for the 1951 fiscal year, beginning July 1. The rest of the bill calls for $646,256 deficiency funds for fiscal year 1950, which ends June 30.

The final vote came in the House, where Delegates rushed it through with only nine dissents.

Battle Due Today

18 Senators Offer Eased DP Measure

NYHT News Service

A bipartisan bloc of Senators forecast success yesterday for their drive to liberalize the displaced-persons law in a battle slated to open in the Senate today.

Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, the majority leader, brought the displaced persons legislation to the floor before the Senate recessed last night. A final vote is expected early next week.

Meanwhile, a bipartisan group of 18 Senators introduced a substitute bill for the highly restrictive measure sponsored by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), chairman of the Judiciary Committee and outspoken foe of the D. P. program.

This substitute measure, drafted by Senator Harley M. Kilgore, (D., W. Va.), is patterned closely after the liberalized D. P. bill approved by the House last June.

Although the Senate Judiciary Committee voted to send the McCarran bill to the floor, a majority of the members have since repudiated it and served notice they will support liberalizing amendments.

Both the McCarran and Kilgore proposals would advance the life of the D.P. program for one year to June 30, 1952, and move forward the cut-off date for determining eligibility to January 1, 1949.

The Kilgore substitute, like the Touse bill, would boost the number of refugees to be admitted from 205,000 to 339,000. Under the McCarran bill, 330,000 would be admitted if they could meet the measure's restrictive eligibility requirements.

Coalition Backs Plan

Ten Democrats and eight Republicans joined in sponsoring the Kilgore substitute. Four are members of the Judiciary Committee. Among the sponsors were Senators Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) and Herbert H. Lehman (D., Lib., N. Y.), H. Alexander Smith and Robert C. Hendrickson (both R., N. Y.) and Willima Benton (D., Conn.).

Meanwhile, statements favoring liberalized DP legislation were issued by three church organizations and 11 well-known Americans.

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the National Lutheran Council and the War Relief Services, National Catholic Welfare Council, issued a joint statement saying they consider the substitute of the Judiciary Committee minority's report "most closely reach the objectives which have been recommended by the various groups concerned with the resettlement of displaced persons, and that they represent an advance toward a workable, just and humane law."

Favor Travel Grant

The joint statement suggested it would be advisable to designate the group benefited by Section 12 "in terms that are not suggestive of distinctions according to race." It also suggested a grant to cover inland transportation for the DPs.

Another statement issued by a group embracing both Republicans and Democrats and drawn from Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths carried an appeal to the Senate to "fulfill our moral obligation and international commitment" by adopting the Ferguson-Graham-Kilgore amendments.

The signers included Gen. Lucius D. Clay, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, James A. Farley, Maj. Gen. William J. Donovan; James F. O'Neil, Manchester, N. H.; Judge Joseph Proskauer of New York; James L. Kraft, president of Kraft Cheese Co.; Mark Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal; Fred Lazarus, Cincinnati, Ohio; Harry Bullis, board chairman, General Mills, and Thomas J. Watson, president, International Business Machines Co.

Ether Used To Treat Mental Cases

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Successful use of a new ether transfusion treatment instead of electro-shock therapy for some forms of mental illness has been reported by New York psychiatrists.

The new treament, said to be particularly effective for morbidly depressed patients, has been under clinical study at Manhattan State Hospital, Wards Island, N. Y., for more than a year.

First public report of its results was given out yesterday by Dr. Frederick MacCurdy, New York commissioner of mental health, following a conference last week of State institution directors.

Dr. MacCurdy stressed that the new treatment cannot be expected to replace electro-shock therapy in all its uses. It appears most helpful, he said, in treatment of "affective psychoses and psychoses with depressive features."

Developed by the New York State Psychiatric Institute, the new therapy was introduced in a carefully controlled experiment conducted at the State hospital. Its clinical results were released by Dr. Nolan D. C. Lewis, institute director.

Of 40 depressive patients treated, Dr. Lewis noted, 21 have recovered sufficiently to be placed on convalescent care; 10 have remained in the hospital but show considerable improvement, and 9 showed no change.

Press Report Called Wrong on Race Bill

In Virginia

Amendment Beaten on Auto Loans

Richmond, Feb. 27 (AP).—An effort to steer automobile dealers out from under legislation designed expressly to cover their sales financing methods was blocked after sharp debate in the Senate today.

Senator Major M. Hillard of Portsmouth argued at length that his bill to require automobile dealers to spell out the various interest, financing and insurance charges for their time contract customers was necessary to protect the public from exhorbitant costs.

He won his point and the Senate rejected 18 to 15 an amendment by Senator Morton G. Goode exempting the car dealers from the bill which applies, as well, to other installment term contracts. Goode contended that provisions of the Hillard bill were covered substantially already in the Code of Virginia. After defeating the amendment the Senate advanced the bill to third reading and put it in line for passage Tuesday.

The caustic Senate debate marked a day in which:

The House of Delegates set the $598,000,000 general appropriations bill as a special and continuing order of business for noon Wednesday.

Both Senate and House approved a joint House resolution setting March 6 as the last day for consideration by either branch of its own bills. Thereafter, the House will consider only Senate bills and the Senate only House bills with locals bills, appropriations measures and constitutional amendments being excepted. By this customary move the assembly hopes to ward off a last-minute jam.

The Senate courts of Justice Committee approved unanimously the administration-backed bill to permit voluntary jury service by women and sent it up for Senate consideration. The measure already has passed the House.

And the general laws committee of the Senate killed by an unrecorded vote the Triplett House joint resolution calling upon the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to stock hard liquor in half-pint bottles.

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, Feb. 27.—The press was guilty of "unfair criticism" in reporting the death of the controversial Boothe race relations bills Friday, the House of Delegates was told today.

The House Courts of Justice Committee "had no desire whatsoever for secrecy," said Chairman J. J. Williams, of Henrico, speaking on a point of personal privilege.

By "insinuating that it violated the rules of the House by voting in executive (secret) session," he added, the press gave an "erroneous impression" to the people of Virginia.

Several reporters gave the following account of the voting, which killed bills sponsored by Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, of Alexandria, to abolish segregation on common carriers and to establish a State race relations commission.

Although a majority of the committee refused to disclose how they voted, Williams said that "The Courts of Justice Committee is at all times willing and able to stand up like men and be counted."

The Gallup Poll

8 in 10 Back FBI Chief on Wire-Tapping

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 27—J. Edgar Hoover, under fire from left-wing critics for FBI activities in wire tapping and loyalty investigation cases, is given a remarkable vote of confidence by the general public in a coast-to-coast survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

More than eight in every 10 persons questioned in this cross-section study say that the head of the FBI has done a good job.

Here is how the public's attitudes shape up in the survey:

"Do you think J. Edgar Hoover has done a good job or a poor job as head of the FBI?"

Good job	79%
Poor job	2
No opinion	19

The small proportion of persons voicing a critical opinion of Hoover—only one in every 50—is virtually without parallel in surveys that have dealt with men in public life.

Here is the vote by political preference:

	Rep.	Dem.	Ind.
Good job	83%	77%	78%
Poor job	2	2	3
No opinion	15	21	19
	100%	100%	100%

Democrats Join Suit on Elections In Montgomery

The Democratic State Central Committee of Montgomery County yesterday entered the legal fight to determine whether County Council elections shall be held on a partisan or nonpartisan basis.

Members of the committee filed a petition of intervention and were named by the Circuit Court as party defendant to an injunction suit previously brought by Col. Norman B. Ames, president of the county's charter committee.

In his suit, Colonel Ames seeks to invalidate the State's Lindsay law, providing for partisan elections, and to bar the supervisors of election from holding a party primary.

The petition of intervention filed by the Democratic unit contended the suit was brought to deprive all candidates of party labels and to prevent Gerald D. Morgan, Bethesda attorney and Democratic candidate for the council, from using his rightful party designation.

Federalists, DAR Clash On One World

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 27.—The principle of world government was branded as the way to destruction of the United States and extolled as the salvation of nations before the General Assembly here tonight.

A public hearing is a packed hall of the House of Delegates resolved largely into a clash between the United World Federalists and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Witnesses testified before a joint committee on Federal relations, which is considering two resolutions to rescind the General Assembly's indorsement in 1944 of the world federation of nations principle.

Members of the Virginia DAR were chief supporters of the resolution, sponsored by Senator Andrew W. Clarke of Alexandria and Delegate J. Maynard Magruder of Arlington.

Mrs. Dubois Brookings, an Alexandria DAR member, called world federation a "super-government proposing the greatest give-away program you ever heard."

Also testifying for the Clarke-Magruder measure were William D. Leetch, Arlington; William R. Furlong, commander in chief of the Military Order of the World War; George P. Grove, Washington Chapter of National Sojourners, and Col. A. C. Oliver, past national chaplain of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Bill to Add Area Judges Advances

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, Feb. 27.—The way was cleared today for passage this week of legislation to assign an additional circuit judge to Arlington County and another to Fairfax-Prince William Alexandria.

The House courts of justice Committee reported favorably the Clarke-Fenwick Senate bill to relieve the two judges of excessively heavy dockets in the area near Washington.

Meanwhile, the House received a bill sponsored by Delegate Edwin Lynch, of Fairfax, to permit the county planning commission to require by local ordinance that school and playground sites be set aside in subdivision planning.

On the floor of the House, Delegate Maynard Magruder of Arlington estimated that Arlington County loses $25,000 annually in taxes as a result of Federal ownership of the Nevius tract on Lee blvd., proposed site of a veterans hospital.

'Mr. Jones, Meet the Master'

Reluctance to Do Things We Should Is Problem of Mankind

FOREWORD

There are no other sermons like Peter Marshall's. For there was no other man like Peter Marshall.

The beloved Chaplain of the United States Senate, Peter Marshall passed away recently at the age of 46. He had attained a national reputation at an age when most clergymen are still unknown.

The Washington Post during the early Lenten season is publishing the richest passages from Peter Marshall's most vigorous sermons. They were preached in Washington's historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. They were addressed to the man he called "Mr. Jones," to the multitude of clerks and taxi drivers, butchers and housewives, motormen and the lonely girl in the hospital ward.

Taken from the book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," the sermons preserve the emphasis of his words, by a special typographical style. The manuscripts are presented exactly as Peter Marshall prepared them.

By Peter Marshall

BY INVITATION OF JESUS

"Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee:

"But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

"And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."

Luke 14:12, 13, 14

One bitterly cold night, when Washington was covered with a blanket of snow, a man sat in his home on Massachusetts Avenue. The house was very comfortable . . .

A crackling log fire threw dancing shadows on the paneled walls. The wind outside was moaning softly and the reading lamp cast a warm glow on the Book this man was reading.

He read the passage of Luke which is our text, and then could read no more.

He had read the Bible often, for he was a good man, but never before did the words seem printed in flame.

He felt as though Someone were standing behind him; he knew he was no longer alone.

"I must be sleepy and dreamy," he thought to himself, "it is time I went to bed."

But it was long ere he fell asleep, for still the voice whispered and still he was conscious of a Presence in the room.

He thought of the dinners and parties he had given in this beautiful home.

He thought of those whom he usually invited,
They were household names in business finance clubs
and in Government circles.
But they were not poor or maimed or lame or blind

He tried to sleep, but somehow he could not close the door of his mind to the procession that shuffled and tapped its way down the corridors of his soul.

There were beggars with trembling lips.

There were sightless eyes that stared straight in front and faces blue with cold.

There were sticks tapping on the pavement

There were crutches that creaked with the weight of a twisted body.

When the morning came, his determination gave him new strength and zest for the day.

His first call downtown was on the engraver.

At the counter he drafted the card he wished engraved, chuckling now and then as he wrote, his eyes shining.

The card read:

Jesus of Nazareth
Requests the honor of your presence at a banquet honoring
The Sons of Want on Friday evening, in a home on Massachusetts Avenue Cars will await you at the Central Union Mission at six o'clock
"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

A few days later, with the cards of invitation in his hand, he walked downtown and gave them out, and within an hour there were several people wondering what could be the meaning of the card that a kindly happy
well-dressed man had placed in their hands.

At six o'clock, a strange group of men stood waiting in the vestibule of the Central Union Mission, talking softly together.

"What is the catch in this, anyhow?" asked one cynical fellow.

"What's the game?"

"Who's throwing this feed?

Anybody know the bird what gave out the tickets?"

"Well, what difference does it make?

I'd stand almost anything for a feed."

Just then someone came over and announced that the cars were at the door; without a word, they went outside.

Perhaps there was something incongruous about it all, seeing these men, clutching their thin coats tightly around their thin bodies, huddling together, their faces pinched and wan blue with cold and unshaven their toes sticking out of their shoes, climbing into two shiny limousines.

By and by, they were seated at the table.

They had looked at the tapestries that hung on the walls.

They had seen the illuminated pictures in their massive frames, and the giant crystal chandelier the concert grand piano that stood across the hall, the spotless linen, and the gleaming silver on the table.

The host rose in his place, and in a voice that trembled slightly said:

"My friends, let us ask the blessing."

"If this is pleasing to Thee, O Lord, bless us as we sit around this table, and bless the food that we are about to receive.

"Bless these men. You know who they are, and what they need.

And help us to do what you want us to do.

Accept our thanks, in Jesus' name. Amen."

And so the ice was broken; conversation began to stir around the table, and soon the first course was laid.

What an amazing thing that he didn't even know the name of a single man!

His guests had no credentials
no social recommendations no particular graces—so far as he could see.

But my, they were hungry!

It seemed to him that these men would be the very ones that Jesus would have gathered around Him—the legion of the world's wounded, the fraternity of the friendless pieces of broken human earthenware.

He watched each plate and directed the servants with a nod or a glance.

He encouraged them to eat;
he laughed at their thinly disguised reluctance,
until they laughed too.

As he sat there, it suddenly occurred to him how different was the conversation!

There were no off-color stories, no whisperings of scandal, no one saying, "Well, I have it on good authority."

They were talking about their friends in misfortune, wishing they were here, too . . .
wondering whether Charlie had managed to get a bed in the charity ward whether Dick had stuck it out when he wanted to end it all, whether the little woman with the baby had got a job.

When the meal was over, there was music.

Someone came in and sat down at the piano.

They listened to "Love's Old Sweet Song"
"Silver Threads Among the Gold" and then a march by Sousa and then "Traumerei"
and then "The Sidewalks of New York."

Someone else joined in—a cracked, wheezing voice, but it started the others.

Men who had not sung for months men who had no reason to sing there they were, joining in.

Now some old favorites: "Daisy"
"A Bicycle Built for Two"
"Swanee River."

Before they knew it, they were singing hymns:
"What a Friend We Have in Jesus"
"The Church in the Wildwood"
"When I Survey the Wondrous Cross."

The pianist stopped, and the guests grouped themselves in soft, comfortable chairs around the log fire.

The host moved among them, smiling . . . his eyes shining.

He said:

"I know you men are wondering what all this means.

I can tell you very simply."

He read from the Gospels stories of One who moved among the sick the outcasts
the despised and the friendless how He visited the ostracized and what He promised to all who believed in Him.

"I'm going to give each of you His Book of Instructions.

I have marked certain passages in it that you will find helpful when you are sick and in pain when you are lonely and discouraged.

"Then I shall see each one of you tomorrow where I saw you today, and we'll have a talk together to see just how I can help you most.

"I have made arrangements for each one of you to get back to your homes, and those who have nowhere to go, I invite to spend the night here."

They shuffled out into the night.

There was a new light in their eyes a smile where there had not been even interest before.

Of course, that never happened.

It is only a piece of imagination.

But why shouldn't it happen, on Massachusetts Avenue in Washington?
on Park Avenue in New York? in Druid Hills in Atlanta?
on the Gold Coast in Chicago?
in Beverly Hills in Los Angeles?

I wonder what would happen if we all agreed to read one of the Gospels, until we came to a place that told us to do something, then went out to do it, and only after we had done it . . . began reading again?

Why don't we do what Jesus says?

How exciting life would become were we to begin living according to His way of life!

Friends would say we had lost our minds—perhaps.

Acquaintances would say we were "peculiar."

Those who dislike us would say we were crazy.

But Someone Else, who had these same things said about Him, would smile, and the joy and peace in our own hearts would tell us who was right.

This, after all, is but an illustration of the fact that our problem is not so much that we don't know what we should do.

We know perfectly well . . . but we don't want to do it.

If you have any goal or dream . . . You care to tell about . . . Of if you have a problem or . . . You entertain a doubt . . . I will be glad to read it and . . . To rhyme it faithfully . . . That others may rejoice with you . . . Of oqer sympathy . . . For we are neighbors in this world . . . And whether large or small . . . Your hopes and fears and smiles and tears . . . Are common to us all . . . And if the least of what I write . . . Will help a little bit . . . Perhaps there will be others who . . . Will share and benefit . . . But take your pen in hand . . . And so inspire other souls . . . To love and understand.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Step Up and Claim Your 30 Cents, Bub

For a moment, it looked like a scene from a gangster movie.

As the cab pulled up to the curb in answer to her hail, the woman jumped inside and ordered: "Follow that car."

The cab shot forward, and the passenger's orders became a bit more explicit. "Follow that streetcar," she said. "I just got off it—and left my purse on the seat."

Catching a streetcar isn't much of a trick for a cab driver. They overhauled the car in a few blocks and the woman got aboard.

But in her excitement she forgot to make any arrangements for paying the cab driver—and inasmuch as she didn't have a purse, he didn't bother to ask for his money. Now Anne Trussell, of Box 173, Hamilton, Va., writes:

"The purse had already been turned in to the operator of the car, and I'd like to thank the cab driver for helping me get it back. I'd also like to reimburse him for his trouble. But I don't know who he is. Can you help by publishing this? The incident happened on the evening of February 19, and the place he picked me up was 14th and G sts. nw."

F LIKE IN FEE FI FO FUM

The Arcade Barbershop, 4322 Gallatin st., Hyattsville, Md., has put out a little advertising card with the trickiest gimmick I've seen in months.

On the card are four lines of type, set off in a box. You are asked to read the four lines once, counting the F's as you go along. Count carefully, but only once.

Then check the correct answer at the end of this column and find out how good a proofreader you'd make.

Here are the four lines of type. Remember: All you have to do is go through it once and count all the F's:

FINISHED FILES ARE THE RESULT OF YEARS OF SCIENTIFIC STUDY COMBINED WITH THE EXPERIENCE OF YEARS.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Thoroughbred 2½-year-old German shepherd female wants home in suburbs; we're moving into apartment." (Shepherd 7645.)

"Three-month-old housebroken pup, mixture of boxer and beagle; wonderful pet." (Victor 9308.)

"Black male kitten, half-grown; his mother was part-Persian." (Union 0023.)

SUGGESTION BOX

Here's an interesting note from a reader who prefers to remain anonymous:

"In the recent British elections, 85 percent of the eligible voters went to the polls. If we had that kind of turnout in this country, we'd elect more public servants and fewer selfish politicians.

"I think it would be a good idea to make a move in that direction by amending our income tax laws. Let's permit taxpayers to claim their personal exemptions only if they have voted in a municipal, State or national election in the preceding two years.

"Those who pay taxes to support this Government should take an active part in picking the people who run it. In a democracy, that's not only their privilege — it's their duty."

There's a good bit of merit to the suggestion. But how would residents of the District qualify for tax exemption if they can't vote?

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. W. H. Thayer, 1003 North Carolina ave. se.: In November of last year, the population of the District was estimated at 867,000. When the current census is completed, we'll have a more accurate figure.

Mrs. Evelyn Sanshuk, 639 Mississippi ave., Silver Spring, Md.: A good guess, but wrong. I'm merely a Clevelander by marriage. My wife was born there.

Thurman R. Hill, 2107 N. Emerson st., Arlington, Va.: A good poem, but far too long for our limited space.

SCHOOL DAZE

When Carolyn Cook of 1523 Patrick Henry dr., Arlington, Va., was down with the flu recently, she got a note from Adell Knight of 1724 N. Huntington st., Arlington, Va. It went like this:

"At last the bug has caught you . . . Don't let it get you down . . . Just lie in bed a'snoozing . . . And never, never frown . . . For soon the bug will leave you . . . And when the flu is o'er . . . You'll sit in school a'wishing . . . That you'd get sick once more."

FEEL FFFFFFOOLISH?

There are six F's in the four lines. Almost everybody who tries the test sees only three. (Most folks miss the F's in the word "of," which appears three times.) I don't know why; maybe it's because it's a "v" sound, instead of an "f" sound.

Whatever the reason, if you want to convince yourself that most people will miss half of the F's, clip out the four lines of type, paste them on a piece of cardboard for permanence, and try the test on your friends.

On Murder Charge

Man Indicted In Bayonet Death of Wife

Frederick R. Ramey, 22, was indicted on a second degree murder charge yesterday in the bayonet death of his young wife, Maytriss, on February 8.

The true bill was one those handed up in 48 cases by a grand jury in District Court. The jury ignored charges in seven cases.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramey lived at 744 6th st. se., with their babies, aged 2 and 1. The bayonetting occurred during a twentieth birthday party for the wife.

Russell Rose, 30, of Partlow, Va., was charged with manslaughter in the death on January 14, of Leroy Murray, 51, of 632 Morton st. nw. Murray died, police said, after being struck by Ross' fist during an argument.

Marine Indicted

Eddie F. Pointer, 24, of 1436 Howard rd. se., was charged with assault on Elizabeth Small, 26, of 2323 14th pl. se., with intent to commit rape.

Sergt. Theodore H. Paluck, 23, of the Marine base at Quantico, Va., was charged under the District's sex psychopath law with taking indecent liberties with an 11-year-old girl on February 12.

Charges of theft of $1763 worth of rifles and shotguns in interstate commerce, and transporting them after they were stolen were contained in an indictment of Gordon A. Francis, jr., 3314 Chauncey pl., Mount Rainier, Md., and Ronald H. Leeper of 4509 South Capitol st.

Four persons were indicted on charges of violation of lottery laws. All the indictments, police said, resulted from "plays" made by undercover men, with marked money.

The persons indicted were: Louise A. Grayson, 37, of 214 D st. nw., seven counts; Mary H. Williams, 33, of 58 Patterson st. ne., five counts; Daniel McGilvery, 1 P st. nw., five counts and Bessie Suber, 45, of 407 New York ave. nw., six counts. All the violations allegedly occurred between January 7 and January 31.

Sergeant's Case Ignored

Among the cases ignored was that of Sergt. John B. Holmes, 23, of the British army, who had been charged with arson. He allegedly set fire to an apartment at 2040 S st. nw., on December 17, and to two autos near 1326 New York ave. nw., on December 22.

District psychiatrists reported he is the victim of a psychosis. Authorities said he will be returned to England in custody of the British army for treatment.

Other cases ignored were those of Robert R. Russell, 37, previously charged with robbery, and Charles Howard Smith, jr., 27, former employe of a Washington contracting firm, previously charged with larceny and embezzlement.

Take Time to count your Blessings
If you aren't among the fortunate who have savings accounts with Oriental Building Association, the prospect of counting in dollars and cents might not be the happiest thought. However, it doesn't take a million to open a savings account—just a little—and before long the little will become a lot. It's the regularity of saving—of putting "just a little" aside month after month that will help give much satisfaction when YOU take time to count your "blessings."

Parity Scale Plan Stirs Farm Revolt

By Drew Pearson

A slow fire burning across the Midwest prairies will stir the biggest rumpus in the Eighty-first Congress and decide the 1950 elections. This is the opinion of ranking politicians on both sides of the aisle.

The fire is a rank-and-file farmers' revolt against the sliding scale of parity payments which Brannan was jammed through Congress by the powerful Farm Bureau Federation plus a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats.

Signs of the revolt are:

1. A poll among Iowa hog farmers taken by Wallace's Farmer, which revealed 45 percent favor the Brannan plan of direct Government payments to farmers, while letting fall the prices to the consumer. Thirty-five percent are back of the present system of the Government buying and storing surpluses to keep prices up. The remainder could not decide. This is a gain of 11 percent in eight months for the Brannan idea.

Commented one hog farmer, "Let the price drop. Maybe some poor folks could have a little meat—especially children. Let's not store pork and have it wasted."

This poll was taken in the home State of Allan Kline, Farm Bureau president, who is bitterly fighting the Brannan plan. Kline boasts "when an Iowa hog sees me, he curls his tail."

2. In North Dakota, Senator Bill Langer and the Nonpartisan League, are preparing to leave the Republican Party in favor of the Brannan plan. A major farm authority in the Dakotas, Editor William Ronald of Mitchell, S. Dak., has been frantically urging the GOP leadership to write a new farm policy.

3. A grass-roots farmers' meeting in Crawford County, Wis., recently turned into a debate on the the Brannan plan. Before the debate, 75 were for the plan, 45 against, and 92 didn't know. After the debate, 103 voted pro, 45 against, and 47 still undecided.

4. Democratic women at the Jefferson-Jackson dinner reported that the question they most wanted data on was the Brannan plan. Its author, Secretary of Agriculture Charley Brannan, got more applause than anyone at the $100-a-plate dinner except Truman.

5. Chairman Harold Cooley of the House Agriculture Committee, noticeably unenthusiastic about the Brannan plan last year, recently told the Farm Bureau of North Carolina, his home State: "Either come up with something better than the Brannan plan, or stop standing in the way." Gov. Kerr Scott of North Carolina, a former State commissioner of agriculture, is on record for the plan.

Fear Income Drop

Back of the farm revolt is an estimated drop of five to six billion dollars in farm income, the fear that farmers' income will drop further under the sliding-scale formula backed by the Farm Bureau, and mounting criticism of piled-up surpluses while food prices remain high in the grocery store.

Here are some comparisons in surplus food costs: In a Washington suburb one school is using free surplus butter to cook with, while the price in the grocery is 77 cents a pound. Surplus potatoes are being sold by the Government at 1 cent per 100 pounds, while selling at retail 10 pounds for 45 cents. Surplus dried eggs are given away to any credited welfare agency which will haul them away in 150-pound barrels or the equivalent of 450 dozen eggs. Eggs are selling in Washington stores at 47 cents a dozen.

Capital Capsules

Getting Tough with Nazis—Inside story of American High Commissioner McCloy's tough-talking speech to the Germans is that Secretary Acheson chided him for being too namby-pamby with the Germans, insisted that he made a public statement saying the United States was aware of the threat of revived nazism. McCloy wasn't enthusiastic but consented to have the State Department write his speech, which incidentally is considered the best thing the United States has done in Germany since the war ended.

Air Competition—Two small, unscheduled airlines have offered to fly the mails for $1 a year—to prove that Government subsidies aren't necessary. Golden North Airways and Air Transport Associates claim they can fly the Alaskan run for the Postoffice and still make enough money from commercial freight to give the Government free service. This would save the taxpayers more than seven million dollars a year.

Communists to Italy—The American Embassy in Moscow reports that the Russian government is releasing 120,000 Italian war prisoners in a spectacular move to bolster the strength of the Communist Party in Italy. All of them have been carefully indoctrinated in Communist schools in Russia and are fanatics. Ten thousand of them have been trained in the Russian demolition and street-fighting school in Kiev.
